More Land? For What? The Fourth Duke Dies If Suddenly Rich, What? Clothes Make Things Happen

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

The United States protests to Germany against the moratorium stopping payments for six months. Our American ambassador expresses "strongest regret that new losses are imposed upon American citizens." We ought to be used to that by now, but it is just as well to protest.

A member of the British House of Commons suggests that, failing cash payment, we might accept something in the way of territory. The British will not give up any territory if they can hold on to it, which they can easily do in this case.

And apart from that, what good would it do us to acquire more territory and have some foolish congressman insist on giving it away? We could not possibly get from the British anything as valuable as the Philippines and we are doing our best to get rid of them at this moment.

The Duke of Wellington is dead, not the "Iron Duke" who had the good fortune to meet Napoleon when the latter was no longer the real Napoleon, winning the Battle of Waterloo from a shadow.

The duke just dead is Arthur Charles Wellesley, fourth in line from the conqueror at Waterloo. He was 85 years old, and inherited all his distinguished ancestor's titles, more numerous perhaps than those of any other living man. They had been conferred upon the original duke by many countries and rulers, grateful to the man who had disposed of Napoleon, whose genius kept them awake at night.

In connection with this Wellington's death, you are reminded of a fact that gave courage and presence of mind to his successful ancestor.

The original Wellington, doing good work for his country in Spain, where he held supreme command of the Spanish armies, as well as of British forces, never actually met Napoleon until Waterloo. He met Napoleon's marshals in Spain, assumed that they were carrying out Napoleon's ideas, even when they were foolish, and formed a low opinion of Napoleon's genius. That gave him confidence when the great battle came.

What would you do if you suddenly found yourself quite rich, with a prospect of "easy riches" to come? Mr. Max Baer, new holder of the heavyweight prize fighting championship, according to the New York Evening Journal, bought himself thirty-five new suits of clothes, "in tan, gray and pastel shades." There was a great crowd waiting outside the tailor shop to cheer him, and he wrote his autograph on a dollar bill for a young girl. Fame is a wonderful thing.

Mr. and Mrs. La Varre, exploring in British Guiana, studying native animals and looking for traces of gold and diamonds, met one thoughtful chief.

Mr. La Varre opened a trunk filled with brilliantly colored dresses for women, to be used in trading, and the chief ordered the trunk closed immediately, saying, "If our women see them they will want to put on clothes. When a woman is naked she is all right. But put clothes on her and things begin to happen."

That sounds primitive, but the Bible confirms it. Eve was "all right" until the apple made her feel the need of clothing.

Poetry is beautiful but New York policemen don't care about it, connected with an arrest. A gentleman with a long, presumably imaginary title, a poet, and a former convict, allegedly ran off with a young girl of 18, and was caught and taken with her to police headquarters. There, addressing himself to "the forces of the universe," he began poetical prayer as follows:

"I am the first, original conception; I am the genius.

"The laws of the universe are in harmony with me."

At that point, Detective Jerry

NORMA TRIAL GOES ON; HER SISTER HERE

Thelma May Aid Bride of Millen; Dewing Blocks Delay

Trial of Norma Brighton Millen as accessory after the fact in the Needham Trust Company holdups and murders will definitely start tomorrow, District Attorney Edmund R. Dewing announced today after a telephone conference with Judge Nelson P. Brown.

At the same time it was learned that Thelma Brighton, long-missing sister of the bride of Murton Millen, convicted killer, would be present at the opening of the trial.

Police Chief Joseph Dean of Foxboro declared he would produce her personally at the courthouse tomorrow.

She may testify as a defense witness if she appears. Attorney Douglas having said he was anxious to have her testimony about the early life of Norma.

These two developments in the case came after Attorney George A. Douglas, Norma's counsel, reported he would seek delay of the trial on the ground he had not received a list of specifications of the crimes charged. Dewing retorted they had been mailed and should have been received.

To avoid further difficulty, Dew-

BLOOD FOUND IN BRIDE'S TRUNK

Trousseau Taken Out; Is Worn by Pretty Wife of 'Captain'

BULLETIN

Vienna, June 19—Traces of blood were found on the lining of the trunk belonging to Miss Agnes Tufverson, missing New York woman lawyer, which was found in the house where Ivan Foderjay lived with Mlle. Ferrand, the police chemist announced.

New York, June 19—A love-starved woman, who for 43 years had lived her own life, fell in love with a dashing, foreign Don Juan not many months ago, and as a result police of four of the largest cities in the world today were looking for her while the man she loved is in a Vienna jail with a beautiful English blonde who says she is his wife.

The blonde, Mlle. Suzanne Ferrand, has become so enmeshed in the disappearance of Miss Agnes Tufverson that Vienna police jubilantly declared they believed they were near a solution of the mystery.

This came when they announced that the internationally known beauty had taken the clothes from the long-sought black trunk in which Miss Tufverson had packed her trousseau and had them remodeled to fit herself.

On the heels of this came the statement from "Captain" Ivan Foderjay that Mlle. Ferrand was not his wife and that he did not know how she got the wedding

LOVE POETRY JUST 'LIES,' SAYS WIFE

Feared for Life, Mrs. Burgess Claims, as Author Is Named

"The hours, beloved, I spent with you
Are sweetest pleasure;
They are so swift, so fleet, so few."

These and scores of other poetic lines were read in Suffolk court today from letters sent to her husband by Mrs. Hazel Irene Burgess, who charges Clifford T. Burgess, Boston and Cape Cod aviator, with cruelty.

The tender lines thrilled a crowded courtroom. But Mrs. Burgess calmly testified that she didn't mean one word. She said they were "all lies," written to keep on the "good side" of her husband "so he wouldn't kill her."

HE NAMES BROWN

Burgess, in defense of his wife's suit, charges that she wants a divorce so that she might be free to marry Royal Brown, Marshfield author of love stories.

One of the missives, dated January 11, 1932, was headed "The Loneliest Sunday Evening I Have Ever Spent."

It contained the poem:

"Each day, Dear Heart, I know I love you more,
Than any day the future brings,
And more than days that have gone before.

"The hours beloved, I spent with you,
Are sweetest pleasure,
They are so swift, so fleet, so few.

"There shall be glamour to the coming years,
Remembering your dearness,
Though I pay with lonely tears.

"I know I love you, you have the power to fill me so,
I am lifted to the Heavens by love swiftness on your voice,
And dashed into the depths of Hell when you frown."

"OWNED BY LOVE"

In another section of the letter:

"Cruel words of scorn that brand themselves into my soul,
Like molten flame. How I tremble at their bitterness.

FIRST LADY NAMED AS 'SOCIALIST'

Linked With Cadman, Ikes, Wise, Borah and Many Others

By Associated Press

New York, June 19—The New York Post, which has charged that the Bureau of Criminal Investigation of the police department has been turned into a "secret police to harry radicals," today said that the department has a list of "radicals" containing 1300 names, and including those of Mayor Laguardia of New York and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The list, said the Post, is in the form of a "little red book," kept in the private office of Capt. John Lagarenne, head of the Bureau of Alien Investigation. He got it, the paper added, from E. F. McCrossin, described as a wealthy and prominent consulting engineer of 12 Wall street.

The book was published a short time ago by the compiler, Mrs. Albert W. (Elizabett) Dilling of Kenilworth, a suburb of Chicago, the Post said.

WHAT LAGUARDIA SAYS

Mayor LaGuardia, when informed of the story, said:

"It is not the first or last list I'll be on—one kind or another."

Previously both the mayor and Police Commissioner O'Ryan had denied that the Bureau of Criminal Investigation had been turned into a "secret police," and General O'Ryan declared that the city was not facing any "Red menace."

Captain Lagarenne, according to the Post, acknowledged that the book is the principal source of his department's information about the "Red menace."

The 1300 names in the book, together with a listing of some of their activities, are those of many prominent persons including, Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, Secretary of the Interior Ickes, Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, Father John A. Ryan, Director of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale, Lillian Wald, social worker, who founded the Henry Street settlement; Mahatma Gandhi, Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War, the Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, Clarence Darrow, Arthur Garfield Hayes, Harold H. Swift, meat packer; Judge Ben Lindsey of Denver; Diego Rivera, Mexican painter; Leopold Stokowski, conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra; and Lorado Taft, sculptor.

'DEAD' BABY IS GIVEN LIFE

By Associated Press

New York, June 19—The tiny heart of a baby who for more than two hours apparently was dead, pulsated rythmically today.

This six-pound daughter of Mrs. Esther Rauch was born yesterday with an umbilical cord tightly twisted about her neck. To all appearances, said Dr. Bernard Zaglin she was dead.

Into the baby's thigh, Dr. Zaglin injected alpha Lobiln, to promote respiration. Into the baby's heart he injected adrenalin chloride, potent primer of the human engine.

Eyelids stirred. The heart beat feebly.

Down on his knees went the doctor, his lips over the baby's mouth. Minute after minute he breathed into the girl's lungs, forcing the tiny chest to expand, contract. When he was exhausted a nurse took his place. For two hours they alternated at the child's side.

Then came a familiar cry. The baby lived.

SEARCH ON FOR LAWYER'S BODY

Police of Old Orchard, Me., today revealed they were searching for the body of George L. Ellsworth, Boston attorney and law school professor. An airplane is being used in the search.

He was traveling in Maine on business and on Sunday he left his traveling bags at a bathhouse where he procured a bathing suit. He has not been seen since, police said.

Ellsworth, formerly had law offices at 53 State street, but his office recently has been at 557 Mt. Auburn street, Watertown. He is a professor at Portia Law School. His home is in Sherborn.

Ellsworth was before the Supreme Court last May to testify in contempt proceedings for alleged failure to answer questions put to him at a hearing before Dunbar F. Carpenter, special commissioner, appointed by the court to hear charges brought by insurance companies against lawyers.

Ellsworth told the court he was within his constitutional rights in not answering certain questions. It was finally agreed Ellsworth would go before Carpenter again.

CHAPTER 2

The ranch where I lived at [illegible] time I was 19 was in Twin Oaks, California, just outside of the town of Livermore. Those who have lived in small places know that the big social event is the weekly dance.

I didn't dance. But I usually went to the socials with a bunch of boys for the purpose of doing a little hell-raising. Usually we picked out the fellows in our crowd who were "girling." By that, I mean those who knew how to dance and had escorted girls. Whenever we got the chance, we'd plague them.

At dances out our way everybody took a jug of wine to the affair and, between dances, the people would go to their autos or buggies where the jug was hidden—or locked up—and take a nip or two. My gang liked wine when it could get it, and raiding the cars whenever there was a chance was considered all right with them.

Although I helped them, I never took a drink—never touched anything alcoholic—up to the time I was twenty. That's another one for Ripley to tell the people who

ROOSEVELT PLANS DRASTIC DEBT ACTION ON GERMANY

President Expected to Retaliate After Conference With Hull On His Power

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, June 19—Disclosure that the United States is considering drastic retaliation against Germany for its action in proclaiming a moratorium on all foreign debt payments was made at the White House today.

President Roosevelt, it was learned, recently asked Secretary of State Hull whether any legislation was necessary before Congress adjourned to enable the government to take retaliatory action against Germany. Secretary Hull replied that it was not necessary and that under the foreign exchange section of legislation enacted last year, the government has the power to take whatever action it deems necessary.

Roosevelt Studies British Proposal

Washington, June 19 (AP)—President Roosevelt and the State Department are inquiring into the proposal of Great Britain to impound the trade profits of Germany to offset the refusal of that government to pay foreign debts.

Clothes Suggested for Debt Payment

London, June 18 (INS)—The suggestion that Great Britain ship shoes and clothing to the United States for the relief of the destitute unemployed and thereby discharge her debt to America was made today in the House of Commons.

Alfred Curry, a Liberal National, called attention to the large number of unemployed in the United States and suggested that, now that the United States government had indicated a willingness to accept payments in kind on its foreign debts, the government explore the possibility of paying by shipping shoes, clothing and other manufactured goods to America.

Gangland Guns Count Enacted

By Universal Service

Washington, June 19—The last official act of the House before adjourning sine die was to enact an anti-crime measure putting a registration tax on gangdom's favorite weapons.

The measure had passed the Senate with amendments, and earlier the House refused to concur in the Senate changes. At the last minute, however, it reversed its stand.

The measure, by keeping a close check on machine guns, sawed-off shot guns, silencers and nonsporting rifles, is designed to keep them out of gangsters' hands.

FOG GROUNDS TWO BOATS

Fog and the shallows of Brewster's Spit grounded a cabin cruiser and a 5000-ton collier today, the latter caught high and dry until tonight and the other furnishing a thrill to three couples before rescue.

Coast guardsmen from the Point Allerton station freed the cabin cruiser Gray Goose but the combined efforts of two patrol boats and two harbor tugs failed to rock free the collier Hamden of Portland with 34 men aboard.

Authorities said that a party was under way aboard the Gray Goose when she struck. Distress signals brought coast guards from both Point Allerton and City Point and the cruiser was dragged off. The occupants refused to give their names.

Maritime and weather authorities sounded warnings of a storm that will sweep the Atlantic seaboard today, from Eastport, Me., to Cape Hatteras.

BEAUTY LINKED IN SEARCH FOR NEW YORK WOMAN

"Captain" Jailed With Girl as Trunk Is Found With Clothes Altered; London Clue Is Fruitless

finery he had watched Mrs. Tufverson buy here.

Mlle. Ferrand, police said, told conflicting stories of how she came by the trunk. Then, it was found the very dress she was wearing when arrested was purchased in New York by Miss Tufverson.

For 43 years Miss Tufverson had lived her own life, achieved success as a lawyer, and saved a modest fortune.

She had most of the material things that are desired by people, but she did not have the love or a husband.

SHE WANTED HUSBAND

A graduate of Columbia Law school, she was a corporation lawyer of unusual ability. In her professional life she met many men, but in her social and domestic life she was alone. She wanted a husband.

Poderjay, debonair, and calling himself a captain in the Czecho-Slovakian army, appeared on the scene.

Culminating a dashing courtship with a proposal which was quickly accepted by Agnes the "captain" and his fiancee were married at the Little Church Around the Corner on Dec. 4, 1933.

DRAWS OUT $25,000

Returning to the bride's East Side apartment the couple spent two honeymoon weeks there during which Agnes began to make preparations for a trip abroad.

She drew $25,000 from her bank deposits and she bought many new clothes and the dainty articles of finery that even a bride of 43 would desire.

They planned on sailing from here on Dec. 20, and Agnes told her sister in Detroit that she was going to Europe.

DROVE TO PIER

A taxi driver informed police that he drove them to the docks of the Hamburg-American line with three trunks and several suitcases. He left them at the pier but they did not board the vessel that was sailing that day.

And since then, Agnes Tufverson has not been seen.

Two days later the "captain" embarked on the SS. Olympic for Southampton, alone and as a single man. He had four trunks and nine suitcases.

One trunk he insisted upon keeping in his cabin with him.

BLONDE MEETS BOAT

When he arrived in England he was met by a blonde woman who was later identified as Mlle. Ferrand.

He then sent a cable to the Detroit sister of Agnes Tufverson, "Sailing for India by way of France," and he signed it "Agnes."

Over five months went by and Agnes was never heard of. And neither was her husband.

Vienna Holds Hope for Solving Mystery

By International News Service

Viena, June 19—New hope for the baffling disappearance of Miss Agnes Tufverson, brilliant New York corporation lawyer, who dropped out of sight after she was made the victim of a bigamous marriage to "Captain" Ivan Poderjay, Jugo-Slovakian adventurer, rested today on Marguerite Susanne Ferrand, Poderjay's blonde English wife, now held in custody by the Viennese police.

One of Miss Tufverson's two trunks, which New York, London and Vienna police had painstaking attempted to trace across the ocean and the continent, was found in Mme. Ferrand's possession.

WORE VICTIM'S DRESS

It now develops that the red dress which the strikingly handsome English woman was wearing when Viennese police found her living with Poderjay in a luxurious apartment here, was Miss Tufverson's garment.

Madame Ferrand denies guilty knowledge of Miss Tufverson's fate, but the Vienna police are hopeful that she will talk, and in the past Vienna police have had marked success in getting recalcitrant persons to talk more than they had intended.

There was no doubt about the ownership of the trunk and its contents when police researched Mme. Ferrand's apartment here.

BOOKS ON LOVE FOUND

One of the first objects from the trunk to pass through their hands was a volume on the "Art of Love." On the fly leaf was written the name "Agnes Tufverson."

There also were two other volumes on birth control. Each had Miss Tufverson's name written in it.

Asked about the trunk, Mme. Ferrand said:

"My husband told me that Miss Tufverson asked him to keep the trunk for her until her return from the world cruise."

When Poderjay was confronted with the new discovery, he said that Miss Tufverson had more luggage than she could take with her when she left on her "world tour," and had left two trunks with him. The second one, he said, he had sent to his sister in Jugo-Slavia.

How Mme. Ferrand had all the bride's trousseau altered to fit her slimmer form was told by Mrs. Mary Foley, a dressmaker who occupied the apartments below those rented by Poderjay and Mme. Ferrand in West Bourne Grove, London.

"A few days after Captain Poderjay returned from America," Mrs. Foley said, "the Ferrand woman brought me all the frocks, a black sealskin coat, and a quantity of lingerie for alteration.

"They were all too big for her and would have fitted a woman about five and one-half feet. Some of the lingerie was brand new but the frocks were slightly worn. My impression was that the clothing was part of a trousseau. It all no doubt came from the United States as all the clothing was of a distinctly American pattern.

EXPENSIVE MATERIAL

"The dresses included an amberwine colored velvet afternoon frock with puff sleeves, a dark green jersey afternoon frock, an oyster white negligee in satin and lace and a blue and white dress, all of expensive beautiful material.

"This Ferrand woman explained that Poderjay was in the dresswear business but I thought it curious he couldn't have brought something with a better fit for his wife."

Mme. Ferrand had told conflicting stories about what had become of the missing woman's baggage, the contents of which, police believe, may hold a solution to the case.

At first she said Poderjay shipped two of Miss Tufverson's trunks to her from New York, and that she forwarded them to his sister, who lives in Laibach, Jugoslavia.

Later she declared she had received two trunks from Poderjay and that she had repacked their contents into two lighter pieces of baggage, which she had then shipped to Laibach.

Brighton, England, June 18 (AP)—The chief of police of Brighton, after another examination of a woman's torso found in a trunk in a railway station here, said today there was no possibility it was that of Miss Agnes Tufverson, missing American lawyer.

No scars, birthmarks or wounds other than those caused by the removal of the head, legs and arms were found, the c'ficer said.

The theory that the body might be that of a Brighton woman who has been missing for some time also was rejected, leaving crack London and provincial detectives and criminologists in a quandary as to where to turn in the bizarre seaving.

The trunk in which the body was found was left at the station on June 6. It was a brown fibre trunk of a type widely used in England. Police opened it when an odor aroused their suspicions.

As police and Scotland Yard pressed forward with an immediate investigation, Scotland Yard revealed that two legs in a suitcase had been discovered in the King's Cross station in London. Police are now searching other railroad stations in the hope of finding the head and arms.

Vienna, June 19 (AP)—Another woman emerged today from the past of Van Poderjay, international Don Juan, as police sought to draw from him a solution of the strange disappearance of Agnes Tufverson, American lawyer.

Mme. Zhivka, a slender blonde, brought forth documents in Belgrade to show that she was divorced fro mthe Yugoslavian officer Nov. 16, 1933—one month before his New York marriage to Miss Tufverson.

Vanished Bride Linked in Trunk Mystery

Outstanding episodes in the mysterious disappearance of Mrs. Agnes Tufverson Poderjay, who vanished a short time after her secret marriage to Captain Ivan Poderjay, now held in custody of the Vienna police, are reproduced here in artist's sketches of their life in New York. Police of three nations are seeking the mysterious trunk that Poderjay is known to have taken with him when he sailed. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

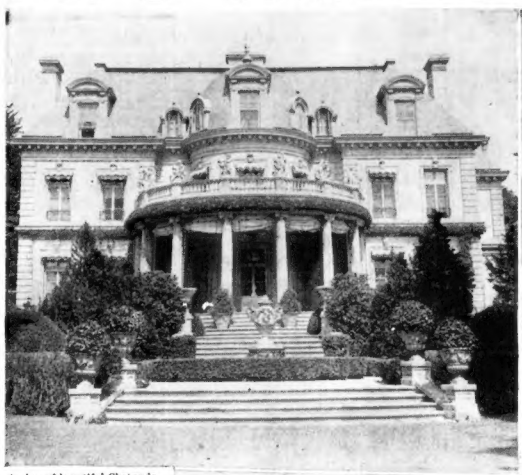
EYES OF SOCIETY FOCUSED ON ASTOR-FRENCH WEDDING



A view of beautiful Chetwode, the home recently purchased by young John Jacob Astor for his bride-to-be, Ellen Tuck French. Chetwode is one of the showplaces of Newport and is set off the fashionable boulevard called Bellevue avenue.

JOHN JACOB ASTOR

LESLEY BOGERT ELLEN TUCK FRENCH VIRGINIA FRENCH

Eyes of society are on three young society girls who will be very much in evidence at the Astor-French wedding soon. Ellen Tuck French (center), who is to become Mrs. John Jacob Astor, III, is shown with her sister, Virginia (right), who will be maid of honor, and Miss Lesley Bogert (left), who will be one of the bridesmaids. (Pictures from International News Photograph Service.)

ASTOR WEDDING PLANS ARE REVEALED

While controversy still raged today over who broke the Astor-Gillespie engagement and who said what to whom to lead up to the break, Francis O. French, father of Miss Ellen Tuck French, next choice of young John Jacob Astor, III, disclosed plans for the wedding on June 30.

Ellen's father, that is to say, disclosed some of the plans. On others he was admittedly hazy.

He is certain, he said, that he will give his daughter away in marriage and that the marriage will take place at 4 p. m. in Trinity Church, Newport, R. I., to be followed by a reception at the Newport home of her mother.

SISTER TO TAKE PART

French knew also that Miss Virginia French, sister of the bride-to-be, will be maid of honor

He had known the best man's name, he said, but he had forgotten it.

"After all, the best man is his choice, isn't it old man?" he commented.

Asked what the bride-to-be would wear, her Dedham father said helplessly:

"Oh, the usual white stuff."

He asked to be excused from giving any details of the feminine bridal apparel.

PASTORS ARE NAMED

French thought, he said, that the Rev. Stanley Hughes would officiate and that perhaps the Rev. Robert R. Wood might assist.

Over in New York, meanwhile, it was declared by young Astor he was the one who broke his engagement with Eileen Gillespie, although it was Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Lewis Gillespie, her parents, who announced the cancellation formally.

By one who should know, it was stated as follows:

It was Astor who explained to Miss Gillespie he was no longer in love with her, and that he did not wish to marry her—or anyone else—"for a long, long time."

SHUT HERSELF IN ROOM

This momentous decision was reached by Astor on Jan. 19, the day on which he was to have escorted Miss Gillespie to the wedding of Eleanor Gould and Ludlow W. Stevens. Following Astor's startling statement, Miss Gillespie hastened to shut herself in her room.

Astor gave as his reason the fact his love had grown cold owing to the differences between the Gillespies and himself over honeymoon plans. Miss Gillespie explained what had happened, and her parents insisted there was but one thing to do—announce the formal cancellation o fhe engagement.

NOT WITHOUT CHAPERONE

It was then Astor phoned the Gillespie apartment and asked if Miss Gillespie would come to see him at the Savoy-Plaza, where he then lived. Mr. Gillespie explained that his daughter could not enter the Astor apartment without a chaperone.

Arrangements were made for a meeting in a public room at the Savoy-Plaza, due to Astor's insistence that he see Miss Gillespie alone.

Following that meeting, Miss Gillespie returned home with a choice tale for her bewildered parents.

So startling were the statements attributed to Astor, a family council was called in the Gillespie apartment.

MESSENGER BOY ACTS AS AID TO STORK

By Associated Press

Wausaw, Wis., June 19—In an isolated hut beneath the wavering glow of an oil lamp, an aged woman and a messenger boy pinch-hit for a physician at the birth of a 12-pound boy.

When the child's coming was imminent yesterday, the doctor assigned was ill and had failed to send a substitute physician. Efforts to reach six other doctors failed, and the father, Hugo Froelich, began a hasty search for substitutes.

Against their protests that they had no medical knowledge, the aged woman and boy were taken to the cabin and performed their task successfully.

It is Froelich's tenth child.

DOCTOR SCORED DURING TRIAL

A man in jail awaiting trial for manslaughter is more important than a desire on the part of Medical Examiner George B. Magrath to attend his class reunion at Harvard, it was declared in superior court today by Judge Louis S. Cox.

After making the declaration, Judge Cox said that if the medical examiner did not make haste to get to court immediately, police would be sent after him on a summons and they would bring him in.

A short time later, however, Dr. Magrath was in communication by telephone with Assistant District Attorney Antonio F. Iovino, who informed Judge Cox that the government would not reach Magrath as a witness until tomorrow.

Dr. Magrath was due in court as a witness in the manslaughter case against Adolph Benkiewicz, 42, of Walnut street, Chelsea.

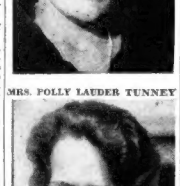
Although he has been in office for nearly six months, it was not until today that a photograph of Mayor Mansfield was placed upon the wall of his office in City Hall. At the same time, a metal picture of former Mayor James M. Curley was placed in the gallery of past chief executives of the city.

Events Awaited

MRS. POLLY LAUDER TUNNEY



MRS. ANN M. LINDBERGH

Two famous families, those of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh and Gene Tunney, former heavyweight boxing champion, are reported to be buying baby clothes preparing for the arrival of the stork.

Intruder Beats School Teacher

New Bedford, June 19—Miss Mary Ann Hall, 33-year-old school teacher, was beaten over the head with a flashlight today by an intruder who entered her fifth-floor suite in the Roosevelt Apartments, County street.

Miss Hall told police she answered a knock on the door and was met with a blow on the head as she opened it. She said she never saw the man before but could identify him.

PLAYMATES ON WAY FOR LINDY, TUNNEY BOYS

New York, June 19—Both Jon Morrow Lindbergh and Gene Lauder Tunney—the closely guarded sons of illustrious and kindnapwary fathers — may soon have brothers, or sisters perhaps.

For three weeks now Anne Morrow Lindbergh has been appearing regularly at the 135 East 80th street office of Dr. Edward M. Hawks, who supervised the stork's activies both in behalf of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., destined for a tragic end, and Jon, now nearly two.

TUNNEYS GET READY

The second addition to the Tunney family—Gene Jr. was born Nov. 13 of 1931, the same year that the first little Lindbergh was snatched from his crib and murdered—will arrive first, if signs do not fail. The former heavyweight champion has already made hospital arrangements for the former Polly Lauder, the Connecticut heiress who became Mrs. Tunney in 1928.

Official confirmation of the forthcoming births was withheld in both the Lindbergh and Tunney households yesterday. By the same token, there were no formal denials. But friends of both families made no secret of the fact that both are laying in fresh supplies of baby clothes.

GENE WON'T TALK

Dr. Hawks, of course, had nothing to say. Yet others about the swanky East 80th street apartment house, where he maintains his offices, were not so secretive. They had noticed that Mrs. Lindbergh—driven in a New Jersey car—had been calling every week for almost a month.

At the Morrow home in Englewood, N. J., Mrs. Lindbergh elected not to talk. She referred inquirers to the office which her husband maintains with Colonel Henry Breckinridge—his lawyer—at 39 Broadway.

"Colonel Lindbergh is not here," Breckinridge vouchsafed.

QUINCY WRECK BLAME IS LAID TO RAILWAY

Six factors contributed to the fatal crash between two New York-New Haven & Hartford railroad trains last November 29 in Atlantic, it was stated in an inquest report filed today in Quincy court.

Herbert Tripp, fireman on the second engine, was fatally injured and lesser injuries were caused to two-score passengers, when one train plowed into another which had stopped to wait for the Neponset River drawbridge to close.

Judge James Halloran of Dedham court, who filed the inquest, declared in it that "criticism may well be directed against the railroad."

Enlarging on this, the inquest states that the second train was operated too fast; that both trains were undermanned; that the signal setup was faulty; that the engineer of the second train, Joseph Sylvia, had been allowed insufficient sleep; that the flagman on the halted train, Frank Alden, was three cars forward, counting passengers, when he should have been starting from the rear car with the warning flag, and that the fireman, Tripp, on the second train, was misled by a "clear" signal visible as the S-curve approached, although there was a "stop" signal just around the bend.

Sylvia and Alden are held to have committed no act that would justify criminal prosecution, the inquest report stated.

GIBB SISTERS ARE IMPROVED

Holyoke, June 19—Mary and Margaret Gibb, the city's Siamese twins, were reported on the road to recovery today. Illness of Margaret for the last week had affected her sister through their physical attachment.

Margaret was taken ill in Connecticut last week while the girls were appearing in a circus. Her rundown condition was communicated to her sister and it was decided to send the girls here for treatment.

For the past week both girls have been affected with chills and fever. Over the weekend their condition took a turn for the better. Today their physician, Dr. George L. Kinne, reported their temperatures had returned to normal.

Mayor and Mrs. Andrew Casassa of Revere will be present tonight at a reception to the record graduating class of the Revere High School in Spanish Gables ballroom, Revere Beach.

Girl Comes Back After Baer 'K.O.'

New York, June 19—Max Baer, who practically convinced himself last Friday that once he hits them they stay down, discovered yesterday that a petite Broadway blonde of his acquaintance is made of sterner stuff than Prime Carnera.

Ordered last month to discontinue a $50,000 damage suit against the boxing Don Juan because she declined to reveal her address, Miss Shirley LaBelle staged a gallant comeback by convincing Supreme Court Justice Aaron J. Levy yesterday that the reason for the secrecy was that Maxie's hired sleuths were forever getting in her platinum hair.

Shirley LaBelle

The upshot after the heavyweight champion's attorneys had protested in vain, was that Miss LaBelle was told to go ahead and sue if she still felt like it, and reserve her address and telephone number for more welcome visitors.

In joining the long list of damsels who have sued Mad Maxie since he came into the heavy money, Miss LaBelle said she had been a trusting girl who thought no wrong when Max invited her up to a room in the Park Central last Dec. 26. She was sure that he wished only to discuss her welfare and proffer fatherly advice.

But once there, she said she discovered the flistic Adonis had something on his mind besides conversation. He never so much as mentioned anything about getting her a job. Instead, she said, he wound his massive arms about her and proceeded to act as if he were out to win a wrestling decision.

She had been a good girl up to the minute she entered that room, Miss LaBelle continued, but after Maxie left her that night she was a physical and mental wreck.

Mayor Asks Veto on Beach Project

Mayor Mansfield today requested Governor Ely to veto a bill calling for expenditure of $250,000 for purchase of land at Mystic river, Somerville, for a bathing beach. The Mayor said that the City of Boston would be compelled to provide $112,000 of that amount for a resort which would not be used by Bostonians.

Student Dies in Crash

Scotia, N. Y., June 19 (INS)—Irving A. McGrew, Jr., 20, Geneva, a student at Hobart College, was killed today when his car skidded. Two other Hobart students, John Brownlee, 20, of Geneva, and Philip Cook, 21, of Springfield, Ohio, were injured.

BACK BAY GIRL LEAP HELD SUICIDE

Mrs. Irene Barnes, 31, was declared a suicide today after five companions had been questioned about her 70-foot leap from an apartment building in Westland avenue, Back Bay.

After talking with Walter Miller, James Walsh, Miss Jeanne Wing and the Misses Marie and Betty Walsh, police said Mrs. Barnes leaped to her death as the result of differences that arose at a party in the building.

Miller, police said, told them he escorted Mrs. Barnes from the party and took her to task for some of the things she had said. She left his apartment in a huff, he said.

Within a few minutes screams of other occupants of the building were heard and Mrs. Barnes hurtled to the ground in the rear of the building. She died at City Hospital a few hours later. Doctors said every major bone in her body had been broken.

Mrs. Barnes had addresses in both Westland avenue and St. Botolph street, police said. They started a search for her estranged husband.

3 Million Gallons Lost Without Tears

Valhalla, N. Y., June 19 (INS)—Three million gallons were lost here, it was learned today, but shed no tears, mater, it was only water, from Kensico reservoir.

Two large leaks were found in water mains. It was estimated that daily for the past five months, 20,000 gallons of water had been draining off into what appeared to be a swamp but was just a wood inundated by the water.

BURGESS LOVE TANGLE BARES 'FALSE' KISS

Another—I would love to shame and send them from me.

But you, Dear One, own me so wholly I am forever yours.

Though you may tire of my devotion it shall endure,

Until the end of time and after then—I love you so."

In a letter of February 4, 1932, she wrote two lines of a poem:

"Let us not weigh each other or our love,

With earthly measures—"

WIFE BACK ON STAND

"Somewhere," the letter continued, "there is a poem but its significance is in those two lines and so there is no poem.

"When I am with you I laugh, I am gay. I am happy. My love for you makes me thrill with happiness. I marvel in your sweetness. I love you. I adore you beyond my comprehension."

A letter of February 6, 1932, after she had received a telephone call from her husband at Lewiston, Me., read:

"My dearest Angel:

"I have just been talking with the most precious person in the world—you, darling.

"I'M SO LONELY"

"When the phone rang I got a terrible thrill. When I heard your wonderful voice, thrills ran up and down my spine. I was as excited as a school girl. Love! That's it! I love you!

"You said you wished that I had been with you. Oh, darling, I just can't wait until you take me in your arms again. I am SO lonely for you. Every night I roll and toss and cannot sleep for longing for you. I guess I have already told you I sleep in your green pajamas so I won't be so lonely.

"It seems every day you grow dearer and dearer to me. I discover something sweet and new that I have overlooked. I think of you all the time.

"Seven more days without my sweetheart and seven more nights. My Heaven is sleeping in your wonderful arms. I am not silly, dear, just madly, wildly in love with the only man in the world. Hurry back to me. "Rene."

FEARED FOR LIFE

"You did not tell him to stay away because he kicked you in the shins?" asked Burgess' counsel.

"No, but there were times when I was afraid of being killed," she replied.

Q—And he would come home and occupy the same bed with you and you would not be killed? A—Yes. Just by the grace of God.

Mrs. Burgess was recalled to the stand after her sister, Mrs. Dora Fensk of Cleveland had reported a beating she said was administered her sister at her Cleveland home by Burgess.

SAW HER HEAD BLEED

"I was sitting in the kitchen with my mother when I heard Rene (a nickname for Mrs. Burgess) and Cliff arguing in the dining room. I looked in and saw him punch her. She fell against the sideboard and cut her head," Mrs. Fensk testified.

Q—Did Mr. Burgess say anything? A—Oh, yes. He said 'leave her alone, she'll be all right.'

Q—Was her head bleeding? A—Yes, very badly.

In June a year ago, Mrs. Fensk continued, Burgess stopped at the Cleveland home during a flying trip.

Q—Did he say anything about your sister? A—He said, 'She had no poise, no social standing and was never a lady until I married her.' Mother said to him, "Well, you can't expect to slap a lady and get away with it." He said, 'Well, I slapped her because she deserved it.'

BROWN LETTERS READ

Mrs. Pearl Van Cannell, mother of Mrs. Burgess, ended a cross-examination by counsel for Burgess with admissions that she "may have" congratulated Burgess and her daughter on how well they were getting along and that she "may have" thanked Burgess for sending her money at one time.

Attorney Van Courtland Lawrence, counsel for Mrs. Burgess, sought today to have barred a series of letters introduced yesterday by Attorney William R. Scharton, counsel for Burgess.

Some of the letters told of Mrs. Burgess meeting Brown near his summer home in Marshfield and of the story-writing ambitions Mrs. Burgess said were instilled in her by the author.

Scharton introduced the letters, he said, to show that the case was "fabricated" by a desire of Mrs. Burgess to free herself because of a romance with Brown. Judge George M. Poland refused to bar them.

SHIPSTEAD LEADS, 3 TO 1

By Associated Press

St. Paul, June 19—Rural support, banked on by Congressman Francis B. Shoemaker to offset the heavy urban vote of United States Senator Henrik Shipstead, failed to materialize in meager returns from the agricultural districts today serving only to swell Shipstead's margin in the race for Farmer-Labor senatorial nomination.

Although first reports gave Shipstead a four to one margin, which Shoemaker later cut to about three to one, returns from 619 precincts of the state's 3696 gave the senator 23,204 to 8160 for Shoemaker.

The see-saw contest for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination saw John Regan, Democratic runner candidate for governor two years ago, forge into the lead for the first time over his nearest competitor, Fred Schilplin.

NORMA'S 'LOST' SISTER FOUND ON TRIAL EVE

ing sent a messenger to the Beacon street office of Douglas with a copy of the specifications. The messenger arrived shortly after noon and handed the packet to Attorney Douglas. This removed the last barrier to any delay in the trial, it was said.

Chief Dean did not reveal Thelma's whereabouts, and said he expected to be told by District Attorney Dewing when to have her at the courthouse. But Dewing said he personally had no interest in her.

Chief Dean visited the Dedham courthouse today and conferred for some time with Dewing. The latter would not divulge details of the meeting but it was believed to be over the appearance of the sister.

Norma, through her attorney, had previously revealed how anxious she was to hear from her sister. She has issued several appeals to her to come forward and aid in the defense.

A list of 23 veniremen has been summoned to appear in court tomorrow. The jury will be chosen from this group.

23 VENIREMEN CALLED

Norma has two challenges on each of the three indictments, a total of six. District Attorney Dewing has an equal number. He said today he did not exect to use any.

In addition to the possible appearance of her sister, Norma will be comforted daily by her mother, Mrs. Margaret Smith Brighton, first wife of the Rev. Norman Brighton.

She has obtained leave of absence from Tewksbury State Hospital and will take up temporary residence in Dedham. She has permission from jail officials to visit her daughter each morning before the latter leaves for court.

POLICE MAY GUARD TRIAL

Jail officials have not yet determined whether a State police guard will be placed about the courthouse during the trial. Many requests for seats at the trial have come by mail.

It has been decided to bar the public from the courtroom during selection of the jury. Arrangements for the public during the actual trial have not yet been determined.

Norma will be taken to the courtroom each day in the auto of Deputy Master Richard P. Shedd. She will be accompanied by a deputy sheriff and matron.

JURORS IN LIST

Veniremen summoned for tomorrow from whom Norma's jury will be chosen are:

FULLER-BACON PACT STUNS WASHBURN

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Endorsement of Senator Walsh, Democrat, by former Governor Fuller, Republican, has left the G. O. P. senatorial nominee, Robert M. Washburn, speechless.

"You may say that Washburn for the first time in 66 years has no comment to make," "Bob" replied when asked to speak his piece.

Incidentally, this unexampled display of self repression on the part of Washburn, "whose spear knows no brother," brought gasps of amazement from the Republican leaders who shopped about over the state for a more acceptable foeman for the senior senator.

JOUST THAT FAILED

Tremblingly they had looked for a buckling on of armor, and a fierce joust between the satirical Washburn and the fiery Fuller, both staunch admirers of the great T. R., as a fighting man.

"Who knows what old sores will be reopened and present day alliances smashed," was the moan that went up.

But Washburn crossed them up again. He went "speechless." Now they are on tenterhooks waiting for him to recover his breath, fearing the worst.

Judson Hannigan, president of the Republican Club, who was "disciplined" for his advice to the party leaders to default on the senatorial nomination, is an interested onlooker.

FEUD 14 YEARS OLD

A "lion of brick" descended on his head after that utterance. Leaders of the old guard and the new guard vied with each other in wrathful denunciation of Hannigan's temerity.

The same thought, expressed in a different way by former Governor Fuller, however, leaves those same party stalwarts undisturbed and Lieutenant-Governor Gaspar G. Bacon rushes into conference and patches up a truce on his own gubernatorial candidacy with the former G. O. P. standard bearer. The stakes—a return to the pay-as-you-go system and a halt on the pardoning of prisoners.

The breach between Fuller and Washburn took place 14 years ago when Fuller was harpooning the present Attorney General Joseph E. Warner out of his then ambition to rise from speakership of the House to lieutenant governor. Fuller gained that nomination for himself and was elected.

Warner was afterwards appointed an assistant attorney general and when Arthur K. Reading was ousted as chief law officer, Warner was elected by the legislature to fill the unexpired term. He has been content to remain in that post, successfully escaping the Democratic landslides of 1930 and '32.

While both his parents stood in the pouring rain watching the work of a driver, the body of Arthur McIntyre, caddy, who drowned yesterday in a pool at the Country Club, Brookline while diving for golf balls, was recovered in 10 feet of water.

The body was found after an all-night search by Arthur Davis, of Reading, a marine diver, with the assistance of Fire Commissioner George W. Goode and Fire Chief Selden R. Allen.

The mother, Mrs. James A. McIntyre of Ballard street, Jamaica Plain, collapsed on the shore of the pool which is used for irrigation purposes, when the body was brought to the surface. Medical Examiner Dr. Benjamin W. Rudman was summoned.

DEATH BRINGS TRAFFIC PROBE

Aroused by the death of little Virginia Lee, 5, of 40 Cushing street, Quincy, killed last week at the corner of Hancock and William streets as she was returning to school, Mayor Charles A. Ross of Quincy today ordered that all crossings frequented by school children be policed.

Mayor Ross declared that a factor in Virginia Lee's death was the lack of a patrolman at that corner. He will ask the City Council traffic committee to make a survey of all streets in Quincy.

The object of this survey will be to end the "jumping" of traffic lights by cutting down side streets through providing for one-way streets near all traffic lights.

Jap Inroads Rouse Anger of British Mill Men

Editor's Note—British coal is coming back, steel is booming and the consumer trades are flourishing, H. R. Knickerbocker, International News Service foreign correspondent, writes in the eighth article of his series on British recovery. But cotton exports are not coming back, he continues, and tells of the British cotton industry's rage against Japan's inroads into Britain's trade.

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Manchester, June 19—Admiral Sir Roger Keyes, until recently commander in chief of the British navy and now a member of parliament, has just declared in the House of Commons that it was a mistake for Britain to cancel the Anglo-Japanese alliance. He advocated a return to it.

The admiral made his statement at a moment when the United States and Japan have entered on naval building plans of unparalleled dimensions, and a few months or at most a year, before decisions will be made of historical importance for the relationships of America with Japan at the naval conference of 1935.

EXPORTS HIT HARD

Lancashire does not agree with the admiral. Lancashire does not like the Japanese because Lancashire exported 7000 million square yards of cotton textiles in 1913, 4000 million in 1924 and 2000 million last year.

Lancashire blames Japanese competition.

Therefore, despite Sir Rogers Keyes, the British Board of Trade, imposed upon Japanese imports into British colonies quota restrictions calculated to check further sales of Japanese textiles in British markets.

British coal is coming back, steel is booming, consumer trades are flourishing. But cotton exports are not coming back.

Meanwhile, Japanese exports rose from 1413 million yards in 1931 to 2090 million yards in 1933.

Lancashire's rage is expressed in typically Lancashire fashion. It is now virtually impossible for a Lancashire speaker on the Japanese question to begin without the preface:

"I hope nobody will accuse me of extremism or panic-mongering."

LANCASHIRE CHEERED

Then follows a demonstration. The speaker holds in his hands a printed cotton exported to Singapore. The Japanese price is $1.60 for 30 yards; the lowest possible English price is $3.31.

The Lancashire audience listens to the speaker with drawn faces. In slum houses around 90,000 jobless textile workers make an unseen audience. When after a year of negotiations between Lancashire and Japan for a world trade agreement, the negotiations were broken off, and Britain slapped on her anti-Japanese quotas, all Lancashire cheered.

To blame is also the fact that while Lancashire machine manufacturers were exporting the latest mill equipment to Japan, Lancashire itself remained contented with equipment, 90 per cent of which, is over 20 years old, as a recent survey showed.

Milk Spouts in Car Crash

The driver was injured and 200 cases of milk poured over the street today when a street car collided with a milk wagon at Mt. Auburn and Summer streets, Watertown, today.

The driver, Michael Hurley of Dale street, Waltham, was taken to Cambridge hospital for treatment of cuts and bruises. Daniel Leahan, motorman of the street car, told police the rails were slippery and the breaks failed to hold.

QUALITY OIL PAYS FOR ITSELF

That's exactly the reason why Mobiloil is the World's Largest Selling Motor Oil

JUST BECAUSE different kinds of oil look very much alike—don't think that "any old oil" will do!

Parts fit tightly in modern engines. Normal running speeds and temperatures are high. It takes a quality oil—tough and heat resistant—to stand up under the double load this situation puts on your lubricant.

That's why Mobiloil is the largest selling oil in the world. It holds its body under high heat. It is tough in the thinnest films. It checks friction—avoids the cause of many repair bills. It provides constant protection against scoring, gumming, excess carbon. It reduces the amount of oil you use, too; you'll buy fewer quarts between oil changes if your oil is Mobiloil.

Four out of five repair bills, it is estimated, start with the oil. Cut this proportion down—with a high quality oil—Mobiloil. Just stop wherever you see the Mobiloil sign when you need oil.

FILPRUF PROTECTS YOU. Mobiloil is the only oil sold in the patented bottle shown above. You get the highest quality—guarded by lock and key all the way from the refinery to you. No extra charge for this protection.

CONGRESS ENDS JOB, ROOSEVELT AT WORK

By Associated Press

Washington, June 19—President Roosevelt, awakening today to find Congress on its way home, promptly set aside much of the next two weeks to put into effect the new powers given to him. Today he looked over new bills, particularly the Housing and Communications measures.

Late tonight he leaves for New Haven, Conn., to receive a degree from Yale. Before going there he wanted to study and sign some of the bills.

Definitely on his calendar late today was an appointment to sign the bill to make silver a part of the metal backing American currency. This signing, postponed from last night, will take place at 8:45 p. m., after all money exchanges are closed.

Very late tonight, the President is boarding his special train for New Haven. After receiving the degree tomorrow he will board the government yacht, Sequoia, and travel up Long Island Sound to see the Harvard-Yale boat races Friday. His son, Franklin, will row with the Harvard freshmen.

PLANS SUNDAY AT HOME

Mr. Roosevelt will motor to his home at Hyde Park, New York, for Sunday, and return here next week. He has postponed his cruise to Puerto Rico and Hawaii until June 30, to enable him to name the new commissions to control the Stock Exchange and communications.

The New Deal Congress appropriated an estimated $8,800,000,000 before it passed into history today. Its finale, which came at 11:45 o'clock last night (Eastern standard time), was marked by a dramatic coup by insurgents and an uproarious farewell sail by Senator Huey Long.

The Congress, besides appropriating nearly seven billion dollars—a sum without peacetime equal, probably, in the records of any congress or parliament in the history of the world—guaranteed an estimated seven billion dollars in home mortgages and farm bonds, set up a two billion dollar stabilization fund, passed thousands of bills, approved between six and eight thousand nominations and ratified a score of treaties.

RAILWAY BILL PASSED

The surprising end came last night after party independents in the Senate smote opposition to the Dill-Crosser Bill to set up a National Board to Conciliate Labor and Employers in their disagreements in the railway inustry.

President Roosevelt and party leaders, had wanted the bill to go over to the next Congress, for they feared final action would mean a prolonged session. The insurgents, however, with such Senators as Wheeler (D., Mont.) and La Follette (R., Wis.) in the forefront, kept driving ahead for action, overcoming a one-man filibuster by Senator Hastings (R., Del.) and finally winning against the opposition of Administration leaders.

The Administration's housing program, providing for partial government guarantee of loans for home building and repair, and other measures to set the construction ball rolling, was the last major item to go through. Earlier the Frazier-Lemke bill, permitting a virtual six-year moratorium on farm mortgage, had passed the final stages of enactment. A filibuster by Senator Long (D-La.) in favor of this made the galleries roar with laughter.

He said a conference report on it was missing and suggested that John Dillinger would do well to hide with the lost papers.

BLAMES 'CITY SLICKERS'

"These city slickers who don't want nothing done for the farmers are taking us country boys for a snipe hunt," he said, "it's enough to make a man cry right here on the floors."

After the papers turned up, conference committee clerks said Long had them in his pocket all the time.

The day saw final action on the high deficiency bill, carrying more than $2,000,000,000 for relief and other purposes. A controversial banking bill, making many changes in the banking laws, went over to the next session, thereby helping break the log jam that thwarted Congress from winding up its business Saturday.

When the word arrived at the White House that Congress was at last resting from its labors, President Roosevelt was found to be resting too. He was abed, fast asleep.

The debate over the Railway Labor Bill was marked by quarrels about company unions and so-called "yellow dog" contracts. Senator Wheeler, after the Senate had voted 76 to 2 to consider the measure, had sought to amend it so that company unions would be designated definitely as organizations to which employers could not contribute. This was lost.

The housing bill as finally sent to the President includes in its provisions:

A guarantee of 20 per cent of loans made by private agencies, with government approval, for home repair and modernization. Individual loans to home owners are limited to $2000. Insurance of long term first mortgages on new homes up to $16,000 is provided, as is insurance of existing mortgages up to 70 per cent of their value.

Rain Sets Off Siren

Traffic in Central square, Cambridge, was tied up today when the fire siren sounded its blast. A short circuit, caused by the heavy rain, was said by police to have started the siren.

AGED WHALER IS FOUND ADRIFT

New Bedford, June 19—Back in the days when he was a hardy whaler, Captain Tomas Snow, now 82 years old, weathered many a storm for days—and even weeks.

Today, he was found unconscious in a disabled 14-foot skiff after searchers had scoured the waters off here all night.

The skiff in which he set sail yesterday morning was sighted drifting aimlessly, 12 miles up the Slocum river by Walter Slocum, Dartmouth selectman. Coast guards and yachtsmen had searched since midnight and had checked the various inlets from here to Martha's Vineyard.

Captain Snow was too weak to talk. The sail of his craft was torn. He was believed to have lain unconscious for hours.

Mrs. Nellie Snow of South Dartmouth, first reported her husband's absence when he had not returned at midnight.

Members of the Padanaram Yacht Club, many schooled in sailing by Captain Snow, joined the search for him.

Ahearn seized the poet's arm, saying: "Come on, break it up." The "poet-ex-convict-nobleman" assured the 18-year-old girl that his prayer "to the forces of the universe" would straighten everything out for them.

New York is interested in the convict poet, in the young girl, and especially in the girl's forlorn father and mother, looking on while the "poet" prayed a preposterous prayer.

London is interested in the gruesome discovery of a woman's body, head, arms and legs missing, tightly packed in a trunk found in an English railway station and of the finding of two legs packed in a suitcase in another station. Once in so often, a murdered body is found in a trunk, that of a woman nearly always.

Cuba has real cause for agitation in the savage attack by gunmen, armed with machine guns, killing fourteen in a peaceful procession through the streets of Havana. The machine gunners fled in a car, it was overtaken, the gasoline tank opened, a match tossed in and the car and machine gunners all burned.

We have our political troubles in the United States, but nothing as violent as that, happily.

The young "Count of Paris," who might be King of France if the French people suddenly lost their wits, believes that he, so far as he knows a direct descendant of Hugh Capet, will soon be called to the French throne. He says, "You would be astonished if you could know how weary France is of the present regime."

The young pretender to the throne might be surprised if he could know how weary France was of her kings before she got rid of them, and how fortunate he is that the common sense of the French will keep him talking, not reigning.

In Chicago, George Rogalski is in court, facing an indictment charging murder. He is accused of kidnaping a young child, and causing her death by leaving her unclothed in an ice house. The prosecution hopes to prove that the boy is 14 years old, in which case he might be sentenced to life imprisonment. In earlier days he could have been hanged without loss of time, even if he had been much younger than 14.

There is no hanging of children now, but there should be some way of making other young children safe against a precocious and vicious monster.

HITLER, PAPEN 'SPLIT' SEEN

By Associated Press

Berlin, June 19—Indications of a possible split between President Von Hindenburg, Germany's "grand old man," and Chancellor Adolf Hitler over Nazi policies were seen today as an aftermath of a startling blast against the government, hinting at return of a monarchy.

This criticism was made by Franz von Papen, vice chancellor, understood to be close to Hindenburg.

Observers were quick to couple his attack on Nazi "extremists" with the resignation of Count Rudolf Nadolny as ambassador to Russia. Count Nadolny is a friend of Von Hindenburg

HANFSTAENGL IS CAREFREE AT CLASS FETE

Still unmolested, unharrassed and unconcerned, Dr. Ernst F. S. Hanfstaengl, of Harvard and Germany, accompanied his class of 1909 to Wenham today for more alumni frolicking—and there was not an anti-Nazi demonstrator in sight.

For that matter, the six-foot Harvard alumnus, who was threatened with all manner of dire things while he was on his way here from Germany, has gone serenely on his way since arrival, and there has not even been a single "boo" sounded in his ears.

PRINCE GUEST

His closest approach to a "razzing" was in New York at the Saturday afternoon luncheon, when a gathering of less than 2000 anti-Nazi sympathizers were outwitted through "Hanfy" Hanfstaengl's coup in boarding a tug for a landing 50 blocks uptown from the liner's pier.

Today's outing for the class of 1909 was at "Princemere," the estate of Frederick H. Prince, another "Naughty Niner" and wealthy polo player.

The German doctor, who disseminates information for the benefit of the foreign press when he is home, still kept up the carefree character he has shown since he came to Boston.

ONLY A "LOAF"

He is only on a "loaf," he maintained. He refuses to be disturbed by any such things as posters on the Harvard Yard fence or accusations from interrogators.

Up early, despite his constant complaints that he hasn't had enough sleep any night at all during the past week, Dr. Hanfstaengl was ready for the tennis, golf, swimming and riding program that the Harvard Class of '09 had slated for today.

Harvard University put an end to anti-Nazi fears that "Hanfy" was to get an honorary degree when it was announced that no such thing was contemplated. None the less, nothing was said about either acceptance or refusal of the Hanfstaengl gift of $1000 for establishing a German scholarship at the Cambridge school.

The German had a busy day yesterday. He had spent the night with Mr. Shaw. He motored to the George Saltonstall West Home in Chestnut Hill, had luncheon, and then went to the Country Club races in Brookline.

In the late afternoon he attended the World War memorial exercises for the dead of the '09 class, then went to the dinner at Harvard Union.

Interesting was the attendance of four state police body guards wherever "Hanfy" went. The four state officers were the traditional flannels and badges of graduates attending reunion, but a couple of them looked a bit young for "Naughty-Niners."

DIONNE SPURNS SHOW MONEY

Corbeil, Ontario, June 19—Ovila Dionne, father of the three-week-old quintuplets, is accepting no money on the contract he signed to exhibit the children at Chicago, Oliver Dionne, his father, said.

The contract called for payment of $100 a week until the children were strong enough to be exhibited and $250 a week while on exhibition. The weekly payment is being returned to Chicago promoters as soon as it is received.

His son "wasn't thinking clearly" when he signed the contract, the 67-year-old Dionne said, adding "the contract must be cancelled as the government has taken a hand."

Five expectants, blessed by Patrick Cardinal Hayes of New York are on their way to the babies. The Dionnes are also waiting for the $1 on its way from Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Wife Accused of Affairs in Suit

Mrs. Margaret K. Allen, comely wife of a Beverly furniture dealer, carried on an affair with a bellboy in a New York apartment last Sept. 2 and then spent the evening in the hotel room of a shoe salesman, according to the testimony of her husband, Frederick W. Allen, suing her for divorce in Salem probate court.

Judge O'Brien took the matter under advisement.

Dad and Girls Get Tufts Degrees

DOROTHY CROCKETT is the latest member of her family to obtain a degree from Tufts College. She is in this year's graduating class. Her father, Ernest D. Crockett (center), graduated with the class of '05, and her sister, Mrs. Maurice M. Blodgett (right), graduated from Jackson, Tufts co-ed college, two years ago. All three attended this year's commencement exercises, of course. (Picture by Boston American Staff Photographer).

RADCLIFFE '34 SINGS ADIEU

With hundreds of their friends and relatives assembled in the dormitory quadrangle, class night was observed by the Radcliffe College seniors, the feature of which was step singing on the terrace of Briggs Hall.

The exercises came to a close with seniors turning over to the freshman class their class banner. The plans for the class night reception were directed by Miss Louise S. Graham, of West Roxbury, vice-president of the Student Government Association.

Intersting was the attendance of four state police body guards wherever "Hanfy" went. The four state officers were the traditional flannels and badges of graduates attending reunion, but a couple of them looked a bit young for "Naughty-Niners."

NORTHEASTERN TO GRADUATE

Tonight at 8 o'clock will mark the graduation of a class of 425 seniors from Northeastern University in the annual commencement exercises tonight at the Arena.

Dr. Payson Smith, state commissioner of education, will give the graduation address.

The day school of engineering graduates will lead the list in numbers with 239, law school next with 101, day school of business administration 62 and evening business school 23.

Yale Man Falls to Death at Reunion

New Haven, Ct., June 19 (INS)—Robert R. Arnold, 38, prominent Albany, N. Y., newspaperman and member of the class of 1919 at Yale, was instantly killed today when he fell from a second story window of a building at 225 Temple street used as headquarters for his class reunion. He attempted to open a window when he lost his balance. Death was pronounced accidental.

DEGREE NO KEY TO FAME, SAYS HARVARD '34

A college degree is no longer the key to social and financial success it was declared today in Sanders Theater at Harvard by Asa E. Phillips, Jr., of Washington, in the senior class oration.

Phillips, a direct descendant of Patrick Henry and of Wendell Phillips, told his listeners that the Harvard class of 1934 knows today that "we are going out into a world that does not want us, a world that is already overcrowded and overproducing."

"When we entered Harvard College," he said, "a degree was commonly believed to be the key to social and financial success, and it was assumed as a matter of course that every rational young man wished above all else to be successful.

HAS RESPONSIBILITY

"This is no longer true. Merely to have a degree is no guarantee of economic independence, but rather, as we are dimly beginning to recognize, it carries a heavy intellectual and moral responsibility to society."

Members of the senior class assembled in front of the Holworthy Hall and marched to the World War chapel in the Harvard yard, where services were led by the Rev. Dwight Bradley of the First Congregational Church, Newton.

Following the services at the chapel, the seniors marched to the theater to participate in the class day exercises. In addition to the class oration, the program included the class poem by Robert M. Howe of Bristol, R. I., and the class ode by John C. Walcott, of New York city.

"NAUGHTY NINERS" OUTING

While the seniors were running off their day's events, the "Naughty Niners"—the 25-year class—were spending the day at "Princemere," the Wenham estate of Frederick H. Prince, international polo player and a classmate.

Buses and automobiles filled with the 1909 men and their families left Harvard Union at 8:30, the men going to "Princemere" and the women and children being entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold L. Challfoux at Beverly Cove.

Tonight 1909 attends the class dinner, the departure from "Princemere" for Cambridge being set at 4:30 p. m.

The 50-year class—1884—with headquarters at the Victoria Club, marked the day by having a dinner at the Chilton Club, 152 Commonwealth avenue.

Under full sail, the new sloop Yacht Volunteer, recently built at Shelburne, Nova Scotia, for Hamilton Brown of Salem, arrived in the harbor today in command of the owner, and attracted much attention as she nosed her way through the water.

Commander Brown, accompanied by Edgar Harding, Herbert Dykman and E. Arthur Shurgar, Jr., of Salem, made the trip in three days despite the fact that they encountered a strong head wind all the way.

Among the arrivals today was the steamer Montoso, commanded by Captain Johnson, in from Arecibo, Porto Rico. The ship had three passengers, Mrs. M. Victoria Horner and her two daughters, Louisa and Ethel, returning to their home in Illinois; also a cargo of 4,200 tons of raw sugar for the American Sugar Refinery. Due to the steamer Ellenor occupying the berth at the dock the Montoso anchored in the stream. She will dock probably on Friday.

By Betty Alden

AS A DIVERSION BETWEEN race days, the Dedham gardens are being opened this afternoon from two until six for the benefit of the Dedham Social Service . . .

Mrs. F. Russell Nourse is to be hostess in her terraced garden which leads down to a beautiful pool in the meadows on her estate; Mrs. Charles L. Harding's Italian gardens with lake, on which white swans glide gracefully about, is one of the most attractive and Mrs. Leslie Soule's walled garden on the Charles river with its famous delphinium and lilies, is sure to attract a large crowd.

MISS CHARIS DENISON

Mrs. George R. Fearing opens her picturesque rose garden with swimming pool and terrace in which she gave a luncheon last week for her granddaughter, Miss Ramelle Cochrane, one of the attractive debutantes of this season . . . and Mrs. Frederick S. Converse shows her terraced gardens of herbs and choice vegetables. In charge of tickets is Mrs. Howell Maynard who has a number of the young society girls assisting her.

Mrs. William A. Whitcomb serves tea at her home, the old Warren estate, Karlstein, one of the old landmarks of that section . . . Mrs. Philip Sherwood (Elsie Burr) and Miss Mary Snelling have charge of the affair.

Crockett-Hopkins Engagement

THE ENGAGEMENT OF MISS CHARIS DENISON, daughter of the Reverend and Mrs. John Hopkins Denison of Santa Barbara and Camarina, Williamstown, Mass., to Frederick E. Crockett of Boston, came as a surprise to many friends . . . Mr. Crockett is the last of the triumvirate, Goodale, Crockett and Vaughan, who went to the Antarctic with Admiral Byrd . . . Eddie Goodale married shortly after he returned from the trip and Norman Vaughan signed off last year and now Crockett is going to jump off on June 25. Miss Denison is an anthropologist and has been studynig at Radcliffe and we hear they will spend considerable time pursuing her studies by an expedition or two now and then . . . Congratulations!

Dr. and Mrs. James Huntington of Commonwealth avenue gave a dinner party recently for the bridal party who will attend Mary Barbour and Alfred kidder, 2d, when they are married on June 23 in Trinity Church. Among the guests were Julia Barbour, maid of honor, Louise B. Barbour, Barbara Kidder, Lucy Rantoul, Josephine Emery, Barbara Bremer, Griselda Higginson, Katherine Peabody, Katherine Winthrop . . . Randolph A. Kidder will be his brother's best man.

Harvard's '09 Class at Show

A BEVY OF THIS SEASON'S debutantes and a group of post-debutantes gave the Harvard '09 twenty-fivers a few heart-throbs last evening in the Naughty-Nineties number at Rindge Auditorium . . . Susan Means, Jane Kelley, Mary Waldron, Louisa Vaughan, Eleanor Roosevelt, Helen Richmond, Betty Reece, Eleanor Porter, Alice Walker, Eleanor Colony, Jane Tobin, Georgianna Pouzzner, Desiree Rogers and Faith Donaldson tripped the light fantastic in a manner that would have shocked the maids of 1909 but the returning niners applauded to the echo . . .

They also applauded just as loudly and just as long the merry wives of 1909 who put on a Gay Nineties number in true New England spirit . . . among this group of Flora-Doras was Mrs. George P. Denny, Mrs. Frederick C. Bacon, Mrs. Harold Chalifoux, Mrs. Joseph P. Cohen, Mrs. John Cutter, Mrs. G. Harold Eegell, Mrs. Francis A. Harding, Mrs. Samuel Hoar, Mrs. Charles E. Inches, Mrs. Lawrence K. Lunt, Mrs. Robert W. Means, Mrs. Benoni Moore, Mrs. William M. Rand, Mrs. Francis M. Rackeman, Mrs. Frank J. Reynolds, Mrs. Carlton R. Richmond, Mrs. Gardiner Swan, Mrs. F. Harold Tolman, Mrs. Chauncy W. Waldron, Mrs. Stanley C. Whipple, and Mrs. Edward E. Wise. They appeared in the costumes in which they enamored their swains in the good old days.

Susan Means

"Nothing of interest" was another amusing sketch of what the Harvard twenty-fiver writes home about . . . sad, if true. More interesting might be their philosophy after twenty-five years out of college . . . or in words of one syllable, what have they learned about life? They haven't lost their enthusiasm, that was evident as round after round of hand-clapping brought the talent before the curtain . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Chalifoux will entertain the wives and daughters of the class of 1909 at their home at Beverly Farms this afternoon while the men disport themselves at Princemere, estate of Frederick H. Prince in Hamilton . . . Olio-1909!

Deborah Jackson

New Choir for Next Spring

A new choral organization, known as the Boston Festival Symphonic Choir, has been organized under the direction of Alexander Thiede, recently announced conductor of the Boston Festival Orchestra and guest conductor of the Simmons College Glee Club for next season in the absence of David Blair McClosky.

The choir, to which singers are still being added, is said to be the only one of its kind in the East. The principal aim is to present music vocally in the manner of instruments of the orchestra. Since the music written in this vein is comparatively rare, much of the programs for next season will be arrangements of compositions originally written for other media. But new compositions are also promised. The first Boston concert will probably be given early next spring.

F. Elliot Cabot is president of the new group; George W. Stewart, vice-president; Louis E. Dalbeck, secretary; John Edmund Murphy, treasurer-librarian. The board of directors includes Mrs. William Arms Fisher, Mrs. F. Elliot Cabot, Mrs. Henry S. Dennison, Mrs. Elmer F. Hathaway, Mrs. George Fell Schroeder, Miss Rose Stewart, Herbert J. Gurney, Wilbur F. Lawson, Holten B. Perkins and Clifford H. Rice.

The choir will be limited to 100 voices.

Music Festival Planned for September

By MOSES SMITH

Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, who is America's patron saint of chamber music, lists among her benefactions the Berkshire Festival of Chamber Music, at South Mountain, Pittsfield. The festival will take place this year on September 19, 20, 21, and will consist of two morning programs and three afternoons.

Aside from the wide interest which the festival attracts among musicians and amateurs, Bostonians are especially concerned because many of the performers and two of the composers represented are from Boston and vicinity. As usual, many of the compositions will receive their first performance on this occasion.

On the afternoon of the 20th the program will contain a Haydn string quartet, Henry Eicheim's new sonata for violin and piano, and John Alden Carpenter's new piano quintet. The next morning there will be a Beethoven trio and a new trio by Roy Harris, and numbers by Bach and Alfredo Casella, who, as pianist, is featured on the first two programs. Joseph Jongen's Rhapsody for piano and wind instruments, Bach's second sonata for flute and piano, Edward Burlingame Hill's new sextet for piano and wind instruments, a Mozart quintet for piano and wind, Ernest C. Tuthill's Fantasy Sonata for piano and clarinet, and Vittorio Rieti's sonata for piano and wind make up an unusually stimulating list for the afternoon of the 20th. This whole program, incidentally, will be played by Bostonians—the Lenox Wind Quintet and Jesus Maria Sanroma, pianist.

Besides sextet, Frank Bridge's sonata for violin and piano and Martinu's sextet will be played on the final morning. In the afternoon Richard Burgin and a chamber orchestra composed of members of the Boston Symphony, assisted by Gigi Aveiino, soprano, and Mr. Sanroma, will present a Bach aria, Respighi's Concerto a cinque, Carlos Martin Loeffler's "Canticon Patris Solis," Couperin's first "Concert Royal," arranged by Mabel Wood Hill, a Lully aria, Cyril B. Rootham's septet and Tansman's Triptique for string orchestra.

Aside from the artists already mentioned there will be other notable performers—Louis Persinger, violinist; John Alden Carpenter as pianist, the Casella—Poltronieri-Rossucci Trio of Rome, the Kroll Sextet, Frank Sheridan, pianist, and the South Mountain String Quartet.

FIVE OF DAMON RUNYON'S STORIES WILL BE PRODUCED FOR SCREEN BY PARAMOUNT

Carole Lombard, George Raft and Lee Tracy Will Be Starred in Series

By JERRY HOFFMAN

Pinch-Hitting for Louella O. Parsons

(Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Los Angeles, June 19—A mad scramble on the part of all Hollywood producers was the result of Winfield Sheehan's deal with Damon Runyon. Since the Fox Company secured first call on all stories written by Damon, guaranteeing to take at least three yearly, the others have been rushing to bid for his surplus yarns. Paramount emerges happily with five, which is good news to Carole Lombard, George Raft and Lee Tracy.

Two have been bought outright. "Broadway Financier" will be used as a vehicle for George Raft when he gets through with his personal appearances back East. "The Idyll of Miss Sarah Brown" has been set aside for Carole Lombard. Options given on "Hold 'Em Yale" and "Dark Dolores," also by the indefatigable sports writing star, undoubtedly will be turned into sales. And there is still "The Lemon Drop Kid," which the Paramount conventioneers now in Hollywood will be glad to hear is owned by them and slated for Lee Tracy.

Not in the years that I've known Phillips Holmes has he paid assiduous court to any young lady except Grantland Rice's daughter, Florence. It looks like any day now for the tinkle of those chimes. Today he must be rejoicing with Florence for she is going immediately into the leading role of "The Captain Hates the Sea." William Gaxton, Fred Keating, Victor McLaglen and Wynne Gibson are the other principals.

"The reason Hollywood loves to have a costume parties," recently wagged a wit, "is to keep alive the vogue for costume pictures." Evidently the colony is going to have another series of masquerades next season. The latest reason will be a romance about Napoleon's brother, Jerome, who came to the United States and worked as a tutor in Baltimore. "Glorious" will be the name of the movie and will star the typically American Jean Muir as a pupil of the tutor. It is based on Rida Johnson Young's play, "Glorious Betsy."

Boo! There, there, I didn't mean to scare you. Just a gentle way of preparing you for the news about Boris Karloff. Lots of finicky fans would be amazed to know how many millions of people over the world can't get enough of horror pictures. Junior Laemmle tells me that even "The Invisible Man" with a star unknown to moviegoers, cleaned up in the theaters. So, "The Were-Wolf of London" will be Karloff's next hair-raiser. Gloria Stuart will be co-starred.

LESLIE HOWARD buying enough clothes, bags, hats, etc. in Hollywood to last until her return from the trip even though it will take her to London and Paris; W. C. FIELDS limping into a cafe on crutches, explaining, "Baby Le Roy bit me"; The Gary Coopers and SIR GUY STANDING getting a kick out of the fast fights in the Hollywood Stadium; JIMMY DURANTE trying to get a turtle neck sweater on over his head, some one yelling: "Why don't you put down that trombone first?" That's all today. See you tomorrow.

Four More Stage Favorites Desert Footlights for Screen

Several Broadway brilliants have affixed their names to contracts, calling for one or more stellar films, with RKO Radio pictures.

Violet Kemble-Cooper

Those who succumbed to the lures of Hollywood were Fred Astaire, the world's favorite dancing comedian; Violet Kemble-Cooper, an institution of the boards; Barbara Robbins, young dramatic star; John Beal, a young comer, and Thelma White, fresh from the Follies, who rates as the sparkling flat's beauty representative.

Astaire is under contract for two pictures. His first is to be a screen version of his hit show, "The Gay Divorce," which Boston saw before New York. In it he has just concluded a successful London appearance. The vivacious Ginger Rogers is to be his leading lady.

Violet Kemble-Cooper is to appear with Ann Harding in an adaptation of Charles Morgan's celebrated book, "The Fountain." She will interpret the principal character role, that of the "Baroness."

Miss Robbins already is at work, co-featured with Ricardo Cortez and John Beal in a screen version of Wilhelm Speyer's play, "Hat, Coat and Glove." Miss Robbins played leads in several Broadway plays including "Overture," "After Tomorrow," "Dangerous Corner," and "No Questions Asked."

Beal recently gained the plaudits of Broadway's usually caustic critics with his splendid interpretation of a featured role in "Another Language."

Thelma White is slated for two pictures but as yet has received no definite assignment.

Summer Play Premiere at Falmouth

By GEORGE HOLLAND

News of the summer theaters comes unabated. From the offices of Rowland Stebbins, the discerning gentleman who produced "The Green Pastures," and "The Pursuit of Happiness," word was received today that his firm's first production of next season will be "Tight Britches," a play about North Carolina hill-folk, by John Taintor Foote and Hubert Hayes.

Of particular interest locally in connection with "Tight Britches" is the fact that the play will have its world premiere at the Beach Theatre, West Falmouth, the week of July 9.

This is the first instance in the recollection of this department in which a summer theater has been used as a "break-in" stand for a Broadway production. Generally, the chief service of a summer theater toward the ultimate success (or failure) of a Broadway production has been to provide a makeshift, or tryout, cast; an undersized and often home-designed production, and a chance for authors and producers to gather something of an audience-effect from the polite customers of the summer playhouse.

The case of "Tight Britches," which has already had production in a university theater down south, is different. The cast which plays at West Falmouth, including Jean Dixon, Joanna Roos, Robert Ingersoll, Mary Orr, Pierre DeRamey, John Milton, Arthur Hughes, Kathleen Comegys, is the cast Mr. Stebbins intends to take to New York. Mr. Stebbins, by the way, has discarded the managerial name, "Laurence Rivers, Inc.," under which he (he was only a stock-broker then) produced his tremendously successful "The Green Pastures."

Frederic McKay and Margaret Hewes have engaged a cast for the Wharf Theater, in Provincetown, and among the players are Coburn Goodwin, Mervin Williams, Michael Spencer, Charles Nickel, Edward Vicary, Virginia Curley, Margaret Callahan, Theodore Peck, Linda Leslie, and Margot Stevenson. "Candle-Light" will be the first production, and July 2 is the date.

Blanche Ring, native of Roxbury, will play for leading role in "Her Master's Voice" at the Town House Theater, Peterborough, N. H., and the first performance has been set for July 4.

Love Chat on the Beach

Did You Know--

That Jean Muir has one of the largest collections of phonograph records in Hollywood, and refuses to own a radio?

That Allen Jenkins is a good carpenter, and has just finished a mammoth dog house for his sis Chows?

That John Eldredge never smokes ready-made cigarettes, but prefers to "roll his own?"

That Margaret Lindsay's recent appendicitis operation cost her around $10,625? The operation itself cost $625; the other $10,000 was money lost because she couldn't take proffered leading roles.

That Lyle Talbot, naturally a very peace-loving chap, has had bloody battles in every one of his pictures?

That Rene Whitney played nurses in her first six pictures, and in real life she almost faints at the sight of blood?

That Hal Le Roy is an aviation addict, and has over 500 flying hours to his credit?

Policeman Robbed

Kansas City, June 19—While Patrolman Clark B. Perry's motorcar was parked in front of his home a thief got away with the blouse of his uniform.

Marion Davies in "Operator 13" Comes to State Friday

"Operator 13," new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Cosmopolitan production co-starring Marion Davies and Gary Cooper, opens at Loew's State theater on Friday.

The picture has been taken from the last novel of Robert W. Chambers and Richard Boleslavsky becomes a serious contender for an Academy award, according to advance reports, because of dash of color in direction.

Again Miss Davies has surrounded herself with an excellent cast—Jean Parker, Katherine Alexander, Ted Healy, Russell Hardie, Henry Wadsworth, Sidney Toler, Douglas Dumbrille, Willar Robertson and —last but not least, the Four Mills Brothers, who contribute the plantation melodies.

Outstanding among the selected short subjects is the sequel to Walt Disney's "Three Little Pigs," called "The Big Bad Wolf," which in addition to the "Three Little Pigs," also has "Little Red Riding Hood and her Grandmother" cast in this latest Silly Symphony.

Tremont Reopening

WIFE DIES IN SUICIDE PACT

By Universal Service

Los Angeles, June 19—After awaiting death for 18 hours beside the body of his 48-year-old wife following a futile attempt to end his own life, Jack Rowley, 54, unemployed carpenter, called police and told of a suicide pact that resulted in his arrest on a charge of murder.

Rowley is in a hospital for treatment for throat wounds and is expected to recover. He and his wife, harried by ill health and financial troubles, turned on the gas in their home. Impatient because of the slowness of death's arrival, Mrs. Rowley, her husband told police, slashed her throat with a razor. Unable to bear her screams, he continued, Rowley ended his wife's life with several blows on the head with a hammer.

The family car, its throat slightly cut, was found dead from gas fumes in the Rowley home.

Masked Death Clues All Fail

By Associated Press

Matawan, N. J., June 19—Detectives still groped today for the key to the bizarre mystery of the white-masked gunman, who, from his seat at the police chief's desk, seriously wounded a rookie patrolman whom he had summoned to headquarters by the flash of a red signal light.

Twenty-four hours of intensive investigation ended with local, county and state police unable to establish a motive for the attack on Patrolman John Flood yesterday.

Chief Sloat questioned several persons throughout the night.

Failure to establish a grudge motive for the shooting led investigators to table that theory, and to return to the possibility that the masked gunman in hunting clothes might have broken into headquarters to rob safes.

EX-BAY STATE CONVICT SLAIN

His mouth sealed by adhesive tape and hands and feet bound with rope, Peter Georgianna, 23, who had served a Concord Reformatory term for automobile stealing in Waltham, was one of three men found slain in an automobile at East Brunswick, N. J. yesterday.

The slaying is believed to have been the work of a rival gang.

Found shot to death with Georgianna were Henry Teel, 24, and Isadore Gutman, 29, also of New Brunswick, N. J. They also were taped and bound.

In January, 1930, Georgianna and Augustus O'Neil of East 69th street, New York, were arrested in Waltham in the automobile of Miss Catherine E. Norton which had been stolen from the yard of her home in Prospect Hill avenue, Waltham.

Georgianna was later indicted for automobile larceny, burglary, assault and battery with intent to kill and robbery.

Each day the Boston Evening American presents 10 tickets to the Merry Frinks whom the Boston Evening American staff camera man "shoots" in the "Picture Snatcher" shots of the series.

At the railroad terminals, on the streets in the busy sections of merchantry or industry, at the ball games, tennis games, graduations, anywhere, the "Camera Snatcher" is seeking shots for the Merry Frinks.

Of the group pictured in the photo the 10 circled by the director of the Merry Frinks are the winners of the theater tickets. Watch for your circles, folks, and join the Merry Frinks clan.

The companion feature is the picture 'A Modern Hero," starring Richard Barthelmess, Jean Muir and an all-star cast.

This Is Life

by

ROBERT E. ROGERS

Robert E. Rogers

In view of the highly specific announcements recently made of plans to organize boycotts against both producers and theaters exhibiting indecent films, the following may be of interest. I take it verbatim from "The Americanization of Edward Bok." I haven't the slightest idea of the legal rights or wrongs in the matter, nor do I know how far conditions have changed in some thirty years. But here it is for what it is worth.

Bok in The Ladies Home Journal had been criticizing women's clubs and had been the recipient of much abuse and demands for his resignation as editor. He goes on to say . . .

"Meanwhile Bok had been watching the petitions for his removal which kept coming in. He was looking for an opening and he soon found it. One of the most prominent women's clubs sent a protest condemning his attitude and advising him by resolutions, which were enclosed, that unless he ceased his attacks, the members of the —— Woman's Club had resolved 'to unitedly and unanimously boycott The Ladies Home Journal and had already put the plan into effect with the current issue.'

"Bok immediately engaged counsel in the city where the club was situated, and instructed his lawyer to begin proceedings for violation of the Sherman Act, against the president and secretary of the club, and three other members; counsel to take particular pains to choose, if possible, the wives of three lawyers.

"Within forty-eight hours Bok heard from the husbands of five wives, who pointed out to him that the women had acted in entire ignorance of the law, and suggested a reconsideration of his action. Bok replied by quoting from the petition which set forth that it was signed 'by the most intelligent women of — — — who were thoroughly versed in civic and national affairs'; and if this were true, Bok argued, it naturally followed that they must have been cognizant of legislative measures so well known and so widely discussed as the Sherman act. He was basing his action, he said, merely on their declaration.

"Bok capitulated, and then apparently with great reluctance, only when the club sent him an official withdrawal of the protest and an apology 'for its ill-considered action'".

As I say, I have not the slightest idea whether Bok's experience has any bearing on a proposal to organize the State of Massachusetts in a boycott of moving pictures. Bok's experience, however, would seem to suggest that the boycott is a double-edged weapon under certain circumstances.

One can only commend the wisdom of the decision not to advertise individual films by naming them. Usually denunciation of play or book or picture merely increases their sales. The famous process by which a reproduction of a third rate nude painting rocketed into fame and fortune by being suppressed is only one of many unfortunate examples. On the other hand, if the producing company or the exhibiting theater is to be boycotted for a month or more for each offence, it pretty nearly involves boycotting the entire moving picture industry of the United States, since there is no company which does not occasionally offend against a strict code of taste and morals.

I foresee a very considerable confusion of mind, not only among the film magnates but also among the public whose morals are being safe-guarded. The crux of the matter obviously is: what definition of indecency and immorality and of offences against taste is to be published? Roughly speaking, there are four kinds of films that might be considered objectionable. I list them in what most people, I imagine, would consider to be an order of increasing seriousness.

1: Immodesty of dress and a tendency toward nudity.

2: Glorification of the gangster and the criminal or a realistic portrayal of current methods of criminals.

3: Emphasis on sex and tacit acceptance of unmoral, immoral or a-moral standards concerning sexual relationships.

4: The Denial (essentially) of the validity of the teachings of any body or bodies of the Christian Church in matters of faith and morals.

There are very many people who react very strongly against all four kinds of films. There are many more people who would react definitely only against sensational or exaggerated examples of the first three, particularly the first, and who feel under no obligation at all to object to the fourth. I suspect that under the proposed system of boycott even the well intentioned are going to feel even more confused than at present as to their duty, unless the public is furnished with a series of precise specifications as to exactly what kinds of films are to be banned and what degree of offence in the four categories is to be subject for action. Lacking such definition, the very people for whose protection the boycott is instituted will be uncertain and bewildered and encouraged not to take it too seriously.

SAYS WOMAN WILL ADOPT DAUGHTER

Admits Abandoning Girl in No. Station; Pleads for Chance

Mrs. Frances Naramore, 22 brought back from Belfast, Me pleaded guilty today in municipal court to abandoning her three-year-old daughter in the North station last week

Judge James H. Devlin held her in $1000 for disposition June 29. She was sent to Charles Street Jail in lieu of bail.

Across the courthouse corridor outside the view of the mother the child, Gordina, was arraigned in juvenile court on the technical charge of being a neglected child

Judge Perkins ordered her into the custody of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children until the day disposition is made of the mother's case.

The little girl sat on the lap of a matron from the Chardon Street Home, while Special Officers Hazen Chalmers and Robert Bowes outlined the case to Judge Perkins. She clasped a doll tightly throughout the proceedings.

Mrs. Naramore told of her hopes and fears for the child before the court session as she talked with a Boston Evening American reporter

SMILES AT TIMES

Her fingers twitched nervously as she spoke, forcing a wan smile at times

She said she did not want to see three-year-old Gordina, who was named after her estranged husband

She wants the child, now at the Chardon Street Home, to be adopted, and believes a Belfast, Me, woman will do so if the Massachusetts authorities permit.

"My baby would get all worked up if I saw her," said the mother. "I don't want to see her now. She's got to get along by herself. Maybe she will have a better chance."

FINDS FRIEND

"I want to give my baby the chance that I never got.

"I left her in that big station in the hope that someone would come along who could give her a good home—give her a chance in life.

"Since all this happened though, I found a good friend in Belfast who wants to adopt Gordina.

"This woman has a child of her own and she wants to adopt Gordina. She wants to give her a home. For three years I tried to make her a home but I failed, miserably.

"Belfast is only a mailing address to me. I haven't got a home.

Words of encouragement—a suggestion that she try again—were met with derision

"Try again? That would mean go back on the welfare. Never. My baby is going to have a chance."

Weak from lack of nourishment the young mother was returned here from Belfast in custody of two officers.

YOUTH KILLED IN CAR UPSET

Kennett Farrar Burnes, Harvard student and son of a Chicago manufacturer with a summer home at Cotuit on the Cape, was fatally injured today when his car left the road in So. Street, H., and overturned three times.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Quinn, 19, Brooklyn society girl, passenger in the car, sustained a laceration on the left cheek and contusions on her back and shoulders.

Tomorrow, Curley will hold a series of conferences with Democratic leaders of various sections of the Commonwealth in my offices at 11 Beacon street," he said.

HER AUTO RIDE COST A LOT

It cost Mrs Mary Donahue of Sumner street, East Boston, heavily to accept an automobile ride home, when preferred by a man in the car. As she alighted at her home, the car moved away, taking with it her $15 coat, her $2 hat, her $2 gloves and her pocketbook, containing $18 and some papers, with her name on them

Despite the name appearing on the papers, however, the articles were not returned to her, and Mrs. Donahue finally asked assistance of Charlestown police in recovering her valuables.

O. O. McIntyre NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

O. O. McIntyre

New York, June 19—The former Irene Castle, slightly and becomingly gray, has become more zealous than ever protecting man's best friend—the dog. She turned down offer after offer to return to the stage or appear on screen to be free to handle affairs of her hobby, "Orphans of the Storm."

This is a canine refuge at Deerfield near Chicago, where lost and strayed pets of a great city are sheltered until suitable homes are found. Miss Castle, in private, the wife of Frederic McLaughlin, wealthy sportsman, often goes to court herself to further prosecutions in animal cruelties.

She makes long trips about the country delivering addresses and spends largely of her own funds. Often she has been called in the middle of the night to salvage some shivering, homeless mutt from an abandoned doorway. Daily she visits her sanctuary to receive the salvo of grateful barks.

Miss Castle's love for dogs dates back to the gingham days when as Irene Foote—and what a prophetic name for a dancer—of New Rochelle, her life was saved in the crack-up of a skating pond by a roaming mongrel of doubtful ancestry. She has more than paid her debt.

Greenwich Village has recaptured some of its lost flavor. Several modestly priced restaurants are offering the casual and unrehearsed cabaret. Everybody is called upon to do something, recite a verse, sing a song or deliver a speech. It is the sort of spontaneous entertainment that flowers best in half-lit minds after a goblet or so of vin ordinaire. And if all catch the mood, is elegant nonsense.

The first restaurant I ever visited in the village was Madam Bertilotti's, later the site of Barney Gallant's jazz mosquie. Dinner was 75 cents, vin compris. We donned paper hats, danced in the narrow aisles to a mechanical piano and visited from table to table. Tiny Tim with his tray of soul candy and Sonia the Russia cigarette girl strolled in and out. It was a new brand of cutupery and seemed the gayest place I had ever seen. I made a vow, if I could hold my job, to become a Bohemian. P. S.—I didn't hold the job.

The brilliantly lit and modernistically angled cafeteria is springing up all around midtown in dazzling over-plus. The automat for years batted for the cafeteria which seemed to make none of the headway so pronounced in other large centers. One chain thought up this slogan right out of its own head: "A Trayful for a Trifle."

Those swank Japanese importing shops on the avenue have always interested me because they seem to prosper without trade. Several pay enormous rentals and are overstaffed with correct clerks in morning coats and ledger-ruled trousers. Few establishments offer such a neat grandeur, albeit none seems to employ the usually gaudily uniformed doorman. Every shop has come through the depression. Yet in all my wanderings of the avenue I've never seen a customer inside nor one entering or leaving. It's kinda spooky-like.

Roy Fox has become the Paul Whiteman of London, now concluding his fourth year there. His gramophone records have the largest sale in Britain. He came of the same school that produced Abe Lyman, Hale Byers, Harry Richman and Buddy De Sylva—the Vernon Country Club near Los Angeles. It was there Buddy De Sylva would "brown up" nightly and with leis around his neck sing and play his ukulele in the Hawaiian room. Buddy was a boy from Azusa, Cal. and Tom Geraghty always declared De Sylva became a bang-up lyric writer by trying to find something to rhyme with his own home town.

Tom Geraghty, incidentally, seems to have gone bally British completely, too. He has been in London now for a year as a major domo for Douglas Fairbanks. Geraghty, a Sunny Jim of the studios, has long been a misfit in Lily Hollywood jig-saw. Several producers have standing offers for him as a scenarist. But he has the Irish love of drink and modified Magnus Merriman who will not be bound.

Lutie Argues With Susan After She Discovers Latter Intends to Marry Roomer

CHAPTER XXVIII

You want some hot water, don't you, Lutie? She started forward. "There's a whole tea-kettle of it on the stove."

But Lutie shook her head and put the bottle behind her back. Her motionless features looked as if they were painted on wood, and in her long shapeless bathrobe she reminded Susan of Mrs. Noah in a Noah's Ark that John had owned in his boyhood.

"I don't want anything just now but an explanation from this young man!" Her head dipped jerkily in Allen's direction. "I think he ought to explain his conduct at once."

"So do I," answered Allen, "and I'm going to do it here and now, Miss Broderick. Susie and I are going to be married. This isn't as bad as you think it is."

"Not as bad!" Lutie cried. "It's ten times worse!" She tossed up her hands in a despairing gesture and the water bag flapped in the air like a red rubber flag. "Certainly you must know that Susan's married already! Why, she's as good as married—you can't break up a thing like that!"

Her head turned toward Susan. "You're just as common as your mother or you wouldn't do a thing like this when you're engaged to Wallace," she said. "This is the worst thing you might expect from a kitchen mechanic—" She turned and went back up the stairs, carrying the bottle by its neck.

Susan faced Allen. "The fat's in the fire, darling," she said and laughed. She was still light-hearted and happy. Now that Lutie knew about Allen and herself she felt a certain relief . . . Lutie would tell the family the whole story and they would make some sort of angry scene tomorrow, no doubt. But what could they do beyond that?

"I don't mind her knowing about us," she murmured, her cheek against his coat. "It's odd—I've been so afraid of the family finding us out—finding out that I'm not going to marry Wallace—and now that it's happened, I don't care a bit, I'm glad of it!"

BLAMES THE CULLENS

Lutie was too sick to get up the next morning and Susan took her her breakfast on a tray. Tea in a little Sheffield pot that had been polished to a lovely pallor, a thin buttery slice of toast, prunes and fresh oranges in a glass bowl.

The daintiness of it seemed to sweeten Lutie's disposition, for after she looked at it she glanced up at Susan with a relaxing of her forehead which had been tightly knotted in a disapproving frown.

"I've been awake half the night thinking about you," she said, her mouth full of toast. "You know you're just infatuated with that good-looking boy, Susan. You can't take him seriously. He doesn't belong to your class of people at all . . . Anyone can see at him and see that. She lifted her sagging eyes with the air of one who was "the daughter of a hundred earls herself."

Well he looks more like a highbrow to me than any man I've ever seen, Lutie," Susan put the cork in an open bottle of camphorated oil on her aunt's bedside table and turned out her night lamp. "You can't make him seem cheap to me no matter what you say about him. I know all about him . . . He's even told me that his father deserted him and his mother, but it doesn't make a bit of difference to me. I want him as I'm going to have him."

Lutie's pale three-pronged of it. "I blame the Cullens for all this," she said. "Having him over there with you and Jim all the time just because they knew it would irritate us to know you were friends with our roomer. I've always disliked us becoming more never had anything to do with them, and I suppose they've done everything they could to turn you against us." She spoke with a certain childish satisfaction.

"There's never said a single word against you, Lutie," Susan answered kindly. "Once Mary did say that she supposed you must hate having a roomer in the house but that couldn't be called a caty remark . . . The Cullens are nice people I like.

"They're good plain people if that's what you mean," Lutie retorted. "Common as ditch water."

Susan knew a sudden impulse to take her by her shoulder and shake her until her teeth rattled. Angry bitter things rose to her lips but she choked them back.

"If they're common so am I," she said. "I'm just as much Cullen as I am Broderick, Lutie." "You are for a fact," Lutie nodded her head vigorously. "Taking up with a fellow like that when you could have Wallace Bennett! If that isn't an indication of low taste, nothing ever was!"

HOUSE LIKE A TOMB

All day long the wind blew from the east, and the grate fires smoked.

The house was like a tomb. Aunt Edna had a touch of rheumatism in her knee and sat groaning over the parlor fire while she turned the cuffs on one of Uncle Worthy's shirts.

Directly after breakfast Uncle Worthy disappeared into his den, after asking Susan for some ginger ale to mix with his "bitters," and at 11 o'clock she came upon him in the upstairs hall, doing his best to climb upon a chair that stood beneath the hall light.

"What are you trying to do?" she asked him.

He made a wavy motion toward the light. "I'm going to take down half the electric light bulbs in this house and see if I can't cut down these electric light bills!" He swore.

"Well, you'd better let me help you," Susan suggested. His voice was thick and his eyes were bloodshot from his bout with the bitters.

He stood and looked at her with dislike in his face while she got up on the chair and unscrewed one of the two light bulbs in the fixture.

"You think I'm not myself, don't you and I don't like it," he said resentfully and went shuffling down the stairs clinging to the bannisters.

Half way through lunch he got up suddenly, moaning that he was terribly sick, and Susan helped him upstairs. Sounds of his bodily anguish reached her and Aunt Edna as they stood in the hall just outside Lutie's room.

And as they stood there Allen called up from the courthouse downstairs.

"Can you come down and go with me for the license?" he asked Susan when she answered the telephone. "Right away, darling."

Susan made a sound of despair so soft that he did not hear it. "Oh, Allen, I can't. Uncle Worthy's sick, and they're in bed with a cold—and the furnace has gone all to pieces—"

"And you have cold feet," Allen finished.

"No—no—no. I'll tell you all about it tonight," said Susan. "Can't you get the thing without my being there?"

"Well, I don't know. I'll see what I can do. Goodby."

At half past five, when Susan started upstairs to change her dress for dinner she met Lutie coming down. She passed her without a word, walked down the hall and tapped upon the panels of Uncle Worthy's study door.

TELLS OF SCENE

"I think he's upstairs lying down," Susan volunteered

"No. He's in here" said Lutie coldly, just as Uncle Worthy called, "Come in."

She vanished within and Susan did not need her sixth sense to tell her that Lutie had gone in to tell her brother about the disgraceful scene in the dining room the night before.

Aunt Edna was at the head of the stairs. She had an empty oil-of-wintergreen bottle in her hand and her corsets squeaked as she squeezed past Susan. "I was just going to take this downstairs so you wouldn't forget to get it filled at the drug store tonight," she said

"My knee's all puffed up like a toy balloon. This cold old iceberg of a house—"

"I'll take the bottle downstairs for you," Susan offered holding out her hand for it. But her aunt shook her head. "No, thanks, I'm going down anyway—" She limped past Susan, her corsets squeaking as she moved

Susan stood at the top of the stairs for a moment listening to the sound of her slow uneven footfalls. They went down the hall to the kitchen. Then presently they came back to the hall. The door of Uncle Worthy's study opened and closed Aunt Edna had gone to sit in at the family conference on Susan's three-cornered love affair.

A street car stopped at the corner. The reflection of its lighted windows lay for a moment on the snow in front of the house and then was gone. There came the sound of Allen whistling his favorite "Waters of Minnetonka" tune as he came up the front walk and around to the side of the house.

Susan gave her hair a last pat with the brush and ran a powder puff quickly across her nose and chin and forehead, whitening a skin that was lovelier without powder. Then she went out into the hall to wait for Allen

After a minute or two had gone by and Allen had not appeared she went softly down to the landing and peered over the railing. There was not a sound in the lower hall and it was empty in the white glare of the electrolier. Allen's hat and overcoat were not on the hall tree

STUDYING LAW

The door of her uncle's study stood open, and the study was empty, too

Susan pulled open the door and hurried down the cold little passage At the foot of the three steps that went down to the side door stood Allen facing the three people who had evidently gone there to meet him as he came in. The two women stood on either side of Uncle Worthy, who was talking to Allen and it struck Susan that they were like a wall, thick and solid and immovable, as they stood there in a row

"And just who and what are you Mr. Sholes, if I may ask in the interests of my niece?" Uncle Worthy was saying in his booming voice as Susan came into the little hallway

Allen shot a look at Susan before he answered

"Well, I intend to be a lawyer sir," he said in a pleasant good-natured tone

Uncle Worthy grunted. "I see. You're not anything now, but you intends to be something by and by," he observed.

"Yes, sir," Allen was still courteous, still pleasant. "I'm studying law at night. In the daytime I work down at the Court House. Deputy clerk."

Uncle Worthy made that grunting contemptuous sound in his throat once more. "And what makes you think you can come into a house like this and force your attentions on a girl like my niece, you—you Jackleg!" he roared.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWERS

Lowdown on Lawmaking

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer

How many voters know what's in a Congressional bill? Or in any bill at all?

The only kind of law we understand is when a traffic cop yanks out a whistle and sets it to music.

The average citizen has a rough, manly idea of governments. He knows if both Houses okay an amendment it will be all right until it is repealed. At least he hopes so

After a law becomes an amendment, then we must hold an election to get rid of it. Thirty-six states can scrap anything, including a Model T flivver.

Congress will not pass any more laws until we forget the ones we have

The Senators have worked hard and earned a good long vacation. And some of the boys are afraid they will get it.

If you attend Century of Progress Exposition do not fail to see the old spool bed (with canopy) loaned by Congressman Frisby. I value it at $1,000,000, but will take less, if I know it is going into a good home. Incidentally, I have always been a great one to make things out of old spools. I am now making a punch board for use at the National Capital. I will place the punch board at the cigar counter in the Congressional restaurant. Life Returns To Rockingham As Stables Gather

When Bill Klem Ate a Decision; The Fastest Track

By AUSTEN LAKE

LIFE IS ASTIR at Rockingham Park, where shipments of sleek nags with pipe-stem legs are arriving hourly. Horsey folk, the whites lean and sun bitten and the blacks of midnight hue, are sorting their gear. The scene is like a war time cavalry school at Fort Ethan Allen, and the talk slow and pleasantly whining.

Racing breeds pictorial characters. There is O. H. "Tobe" Trotter, the shrewd-faced, youngish man who trains for the Jersey Stables, and who is wearing a cross hatching of cuts on his face.

He is lucky to be alive, he says. Because only the other day, en route to Rockingham with a car of horses, a Bridgeport street car crashed into the coach and sent the animals stamping in a frenzy of fear. Like all good trainers, Trotter was sleeping in the car between the horses and was buried under a barrage of flying hoofs and falling bodies.

Austen Lake

He escaped by sheer miracle, though being knocked unconscious, and after a few days in the Bridgeport Hospital, came on to resume training.

Ellis Performs Heroic Reducing Act

THEN THERE IS the younger brother of the late Buddy Hanford, famous rider, who was killed at Pimlico a year ago last spring, while riding a horse named Apprehensive. Carl is the boy's name, and he is a "hug," or apprentice jockey, who is making his debut at Rockingham.

Incidentally, Buddy Hanford and Duke Bellizi, another jockey who was killed last spring, were great admirers and intimate friends of Sally Rand, the fan dancer. Their rivalry for her favors was the tack room gossip around the country.

Now, since the death of the two boys, the superstition among the monkey men is, "Keep away from Sally Rand. She's bad medicine."

STOUT PEOPLE WHO HAVE tried to reduce the fleshy inner tubes about their middles by abstaining from marshmallow puddings and cream tarts, will understand the heroism required by George Ellis, a successful jockey a few years ago who retired to Hollywood to live a life of luxury.

Ellis, who rode Mate to victory in the Preakness and American Derby in 1930, is at Rockingham now, intent on a comeback after finding that his supply of cash had melted away before the heat of his spending. One of the entertaining sights, when viewed from the cool of the grandstand, is Ellis, clad in a rubber shirt and several heavy woolen sweaters, grinding mile after mile around the infield, perspiring away an ounce at a time.

Thus far he has melted off 15 pounds and is down to 110. But the agony, he says, is to keep his present weight and to eschew all the little foods that his appetite craves.

THE STRANGE REVERSAL of decision by Umpire Bill Klem in Chicago, Monday, when he ruled Chuck Klein's "homerun" against the Braves fair after Umpire Bill Stewart had declared it foul, recalls that Bill's favorite boast is, "I've never been proved wrong."

Maybe, as a result of Judge Fuchs' protest to President Heydler, Bill will be forced to eat his boast. But it will not be the first time, folks. No sir! There was that game at Braves Field two seasons ago when Art Shires hit a looping fly into right field, and the Brooklyn fielder nabbed the ball close to the ground.

Cy Pfirman, umpiring at second base, ran out and ruled the play a "trapped ball" while Klem, umpire at first base, was also running out, waving his palms flat toward the turf as a signal of a fair catch.

Well, for a moment it like to have bust the ball game apart, what with the soul screeches of the Braves and Brooklyns, who huddled about the two arbiters. In the end, Klem, graciously conceded that Pfirman was closer to the play, and perhaps, after all, he (Klem) might have been wrong. So he overruled himself.

I AM HEARING from Bill Bingham, Harvard's athletic director and authority on track, why the Princeton cinder path is the fastest in the country and explaining why two world record miles have been run there within a year, Lockwood's 4:07.6 and Cunningham's 4:06.7.

It seems when the Palmer Stadium was built way back in 1915, the architects decided to add an innovation by sunking the track several feet below the level of the football field. And before Keene Fitzpatrick heard about it, the path, grooved like a wide gutter, was in place.

Keene was horrified and said bluntly that he did not propose to have his football men skating off into a ditch at the risk of mortal injury. So the track was filled with cinders to the level of the field, thus giving a depth of between three and four feet of fine cinders instead of the one foot that is usual. Over the years this has been stamped and rolled, growing more elastic with age, until today it is the fastest racing saucer in the country, if not in the world.

BOX FAILINGS IRKS CHIEF OF RED SOX

By Joe Cashman

A big leaguer who fails to hit .300 two days ought to be [illegible]

[illegible] of Eds-Co-Co-ta.

Now that may be news to you, but it was merely confirmation to the ears of your envoy. You see, we were present along with General Manager Eddie while his Red Sox and the St. Louis Browns were employing 24 pitchers during the last two afternoons of their series.

In our experience, which extends back well over half the life of the American League, the circuit was never such a hitters' paradise.

The pitching parade at the Fens to put two mittmen was no [illegible]. There was a [illegible] [illegible] where he finds a [illegible] on [illegible] complete game.

HIT THE WILDNESS"

In fact, there is every reason to believe that any club you name would be better off if all hurlers, with the possible exceptions of Vernon Gomez and Tommy Bridges, were thrown into the nearest lake and infielders or outfielders sent to bat.

The stock alibi of the flinging fraternity is, of course, the lively ball.

But that doesn't go with Mr. Coles.

"The lively ball naturally doesn't increase a pitcher's effectiveness," chirped "Cocky," "but neither does it explain a dozen walks, five or six wild pitches and three or four batters hit by pitched balls in one game, a common occurrence this spring."

As Collins points out, the lively ball shouldn't have any effect on control, but the fact remains that it has plenty. The hurlers haven't the courage to throw strikes until they're in the hole. Then their offerings are hammered or miss the target and are converted into walks.

FANS WALK OUT

Either the hurlers must overcome their fear of the sphere or the discourse in it must be lessened. The fans like hitting but they're getting far more for-see-bawlin' at the moment than they can stand.

There were close to 16,000 cash customers at the Monday twin-bill, but, though the Sox won both, there weren't more than 6000 present when the first game was made at 2 p. m.

The scores were 6 to 5 and 14 to 9, with 45 hits being made off 33 pitchers, who handed out 23 bases on balls and hit four batters.

Monday's double triumph put the Sox two games over the .500 mark, three games above the Browns and only four games behind the pace-setting Yanks, who were beaten in the ninth by the second-place Tigers.

The Sox remain idle today. Chicago's White Sox come to town for five games in four days. The twin-bill is slated for Thursday.

Eddie Morgan was "bopped" by Jumpy Hadley in the fourth inning of the Monday opener. The ball bounced off the top of the first-sacker's head into the grand stand, and he was out cold for a few minutes.

Somerville Jack Burns, who'd look right nice in a Boston uniform, caught a Wesley Ferrell while tripping over the Sox pet rock and held the ball as he fell down into the bench.

Rogers Hornsby willingly agreed to let the Sox use a pinch runner for Morgan. When more, the Rajah allowed Harris to pick the sub. "Bucky" chose the first "Dusty" Cooke, who promptly stole second and scored the first run of the afternoon on Roy Johnson's double.

The accident greatly upset Hadley. He made two bad throws to first, walked a batter and was found for four hits and four runs ere the fourth frame was over.

If Morgan had been forced to retire, Lyn Lary would have been sent to first, with Cissell moving to short and Bishop going to second.

CRIMSON-ELI DIAMOND TILT RAINED OUT

By Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., June 19. The baseball series, traditional August feature of the Eli commencement activities, was postponed today because of rain.

The "Big Three" rivals planned to leave here in the afternoon for Cambridge, Mass., where they play tomorrow.

The game scheduled for today will be played here Thursday afternoon.

Because of the weather tomorrow classes also cancelled the parade which, customarily precedes the game.

Baseball Tourney Opens at Belmont

Mystic Valley and All-Middlesex baseball teams prepared today for their dash in the opening of the tournament, among all-star troops of Greater Boston, at Belmont High field this afternoon at 5:45 o'clock.

The starting pitchers were listed as Don Lupo of Watertown for the Mystic group, and Lehte of Maynard for the Middlesex.

The All-Catholic High nine faces the All-Suburban team tomorrow night at Brookline High field in the second game of the series.

Braves Add Rhem and Barrett to Staff

Chicago, June 19—Manager Bill McKechnie of the Braves today moved in two directions to strengthen his fading hill corps.

The purchase of Flint Rhem, veteran right-hander, from the Cards was announced by the Tribe leader. At the same time it revealed he had recalled Dick Barrett from the Albany club of the International League. Both hurlers will join the Warriors in Pittsburgh tomorrow.

Rhem had been released to the St. Louis Club of the International League ten days ago but refused to report. He asked the Cards for permission to negotiate a trade for himself, [illegible] was granted [illegible] Rhem will [illegible] Braves [illegible] pitchers.

SOLD FOR WAIVER PRICE

President Sam Breadon of the Cardinals said when the Braves were in Sound City last week the Tribe had a long conference with McKechnie. The Tribe man must made the trade with the Cards for the player, paying what is believed to have been the waiver price.

This morning McKechnie sent Rhem a telegram demanding:

"Why haven't you reported to the Braves?"

The pitcher immediately conferred with Manager Frisch of the Cardinals, who rushed to the front office with a request that the St. Louis club retain the veteran. He was informed that the deal had already been made.

SENSATION IN MINORS

Barrett has been a sensation at Albany. He has pitched several low-hit games and should be of tremendous value to the Tribe, pressed as they are at present for hurlers. Only last Sunday, he went in as a relief hurler and pitched hitless ball.

With Ben Cantwell unavailable for some time because of an injury, it is possible that both Rhem and Barrett may get starting assignments in Pittsburgh when the games are scheduled in four days.

In the series finale with the Cubs this afternoon Ed Brandt and Pat Malone are expected to be the [illegible] pitchers.

CHAMP TAKES MOTHER OUT FOR GOOD TIME

By International News Service

New York, June 19—However gay Champion Max Baer took his mother out last night and had one fine time.

She was tall and she was gaunt. But before she left the evening ended.

"Better go to sleep now, little man, you've had a busy day," Maxie laughed and said.

"Isn't she marvelous?"

He said that before and many times later. But the answer is hard. At this time was something that made you girl sense trouble.

Need any more be told? You guessed it. It was his mother, here from Denver.

Did the boys put on a party for her last night?

But, it's only begun. Just as long as she stays in New York she's dated up by the champion, who says he's going to keep her here as long as she'll stay, because:

"I was on edge since the fight, waiting for her to get here and tell me how happy she was."

There were plenty of gins at the party, but if they got was a passing glance as the big champion whispered sweet things into his mother's ear and caressed her.

Baseball Tips—No. 11

By Austen Lake

PITCHER'S GRIP ON THE BALL

Most major league pitchers grip the ball with their top two fingers across the stitches of the ball instead of between the seams. This is to get a firm purchase and impart a greater spin to their curves. Young pitchers must be careful to hold the ball the same way for every type of delivery, particularly avoiding the familiar schoolboy habit of curling the thumb back when throwing their curve. Opposing batsmen and coaches are quick to notice such changes and "read" the type of pitch beforehand. Be sure to cover the ball with your glove when "making it up" for the pitch. Grip the ball firmly, but neither too loosely nor too tightly. Flexibility of the wrists and forearm muscles are vital.

Death's Track Challenge Fails to Daunt Youngster

Jockey Carl Hanford Carries on in Boots of Brother Buddy

By Dave Egan

This is the story, good people, of an 18-year-old boy, who combines daring with courage and skill with the menace of a shadow which has robbed him of a brother.

It is the story of the race track, that oblong oval which gives off gallant tales of chivalry and of romance, and oftentimes of —

... Carl Hanford. ... settled on his ... features ... grim ... and, too ... industry.

... face of ... though still springs from wells of hearty contentment, of pleasure and clean satisfaction.

But withal, the ominous figure of tragedy has crossed the path of the youngster and there is nothing sadder than to have the Man with the Scythe spoil the pleasure of the young.

WOULD CARRY ON

It was last autumn that Buddy Hanford, one of the most promising riders of the country, was crushed to death a Pimlico. Buddy had the mount on Apprehensive. There was a spill, a bad mixup, and at the bottom of the tons of horseflesh lay the still, white body of little Buddy. When they came to his people they found he was beyond all help. He was dead.

Carl received the news at his home with a stoic calm which belied his indifference. Buddy was more than his brother; he was his worshipped favorite.

... of passion and sentiment ... the ... where both ... had ... his ...

But then and there was born a determination in the breast of the youngster. Carl had the courage. He trained himself to the skill.

Such things are probably inherent. They were part of Buddy Hanford's equipment until he ran his last race on Apprehensive.

"I'll ride to win," he says, and his words send such Freudian theories as complexes and inhibitions to cover.

In the words of Mr. Walter Winchell, here's a salute to Carl Hanford who is having a double battle.

Carl, courageous to the core, refused to let that tragedy end his career. He is expected to thrill Rockingham fans with his riding. (Pictures by Boston American Staff Photographer.)

Baer Tells of Punch Which Changed Career

Lamb Turns to Lion When He Learns He Can "Take It"

think I've been drying up a few wineries and a distillery or two ever since I started making a little loose money.

CAN'T HELP GRINNING

Several days before the particular dance night which changed my life entirely, one of those traveling painters came to town and got a job painting a couple of steeple. He went to the dance with a girl and a jug of wine, failed to look him up, and my pal stole the wife and drank it.

The painter discovering his loss began to yell and demanded to know who did the job. Some critter pointed us out. The painter was a big bird—6 feet tall and weighed about 200 or so. The other boys and I had taken it on the jam before I saw the painter charging at me.

I was trapped—couldn't run away. If ever a boy was petrified with terror, I was that boy. I just stood waiting for my doom. I remember shaking; remember that my teeth chattered and my heart nearly knocked my ribs loose.

With a wild oath, the painter leaped at me and loosed his swing. The punch caught me flush on the chin.

Then something happened that I cannot fully describe. I felt glad—fiendishly glad—proud—immensely relieved, inside. I had been hit—and was still alive. Hit, and still on my feet. Hit, and standing up.

I started to laugh—a crazy sort of laugh—and a daffy sort of grin came over my face. I wasn't conscious of laughing or grinning. The boys told me about it later. It's the same laugh that comes to me now—the same grin—whenever I am lathered pretty well by an opponent. I—

CAN'T EXPLAIN IT

I was not aware then of laughing or grinning. n all my fights since then that grin has become a habit, but I am nto aware of it. I grin, and don't know I am doing fore—never grinned like that—until that punch landed.

Perhaps some doctor or scientist can explain why I do it. I can't.

I've said that up to the very instant that blow struck me, with two hundred pounds of enraged manhood behind it, I was the yellowest kid in America. I was in constant fear of pain—physical hurt. Since it hit, I have feared no living human. I mean that.

In one second of time some kind of a miracle happened to me. My whole attitude toward life—my whole life—was changed.

The little scared lamb—the yellow kid—became a roaring lion; or should I say Baer?

When I was hit, I was standing in a hollow square between parked automobiles and buggies. Many of the cars had their headlights on, and most of these shone on the painter and myself, because we were in about the center of that square.

I don't know what the painter would have done if I hadn't pulled that wild laugh and that daffier grin. But I do know that instead of tearing in at me he stopped, stood still, looked at me—a strangely, puzzled man. He had banged me hard enough to flatten any man—and there I was standing and grinning.

NEVER HIT A MAN BEFORE

Up to that exact moment I never had swung a punch at any living human. But I knew the motion. Fear was all gone from me. I was mad, for the first time in my life—boiling mad. This guy had socked me for something I hadn't done. I didn't—can't—have actly figured out—still my right hand touch d the guy—just as far as to get leverage for a punch. I didn't cose my fist until it touched the ground. Then I let go. I wasn't aiming for the chin—didn't know it was the vital spot. I just threw that punch at his head, hoping it would land.

THE PLAYBOY PLAYS. Here's the heavyweight lover in another of his engaging roles. Song and dance man as well as slugger par excellence, that's Der Max. And a pretty good judge of feminine pulchritude as well. (Picture by Inter national News Photo Service.)

And it did—alongside the left ear. The marksmanship wasn't so hot then. But there was steam in the drive, because the fellow went down as if hit by a sledge hammer. He didn't just crumple and then wilt to the ground. It was as if I had tipped over a heavy statue.

PUT AN END TO COWARDICE

I saw him there at my feet—out, cut and out. Some strange feeling came within me. My blood seemed to be racing in my veins. I was wildly happy. I, who had lived a life of fear; I, who had been afraid, had with one blow knocked a giant of a man into insensibility.

I took one look at the still unconscious painter—and laughed. But I didn't know I was laughing. I grinned and have no remembrance of that. My pals, who had slipped back to see the fight, told me about it.

All that I know is that I, who had been coward for nineteen years, as I saw what had happened because of one punch, suddenly said within me a voice which said:

"Max, you can whip any man in the world with your fists."

I've never lost that faith. In the years since, I've had some tough fights, and I've blown a few defenses. But no defeat ever has discouraged me. The voice always has repeated the message of that night. It's the thing that prompts me to do all the boasting; it's the something that keeps my confidence at the boiling point, despite any and all set-backs.

The inner voice told me I was a cinch to be the champion; and I've spoken aloud its message through five years. Folks call it boasting. That's all right. They can call it what they wan... I'm the greatest heavyweight boxer in the world—and I proved it.

I knew I could beat the Canary Bird (Prima Camera). I can beat Five Canary Birdseven of them a hundred, if necessary. The voice says so. It never has been wrong. It never will be. No matter how many girls are in my life, no matter if I have a d... k... w... d there, I said to my father:

"I'm through with ranching I'm going to be a fighter"

That was my father's cue to laugh. He didn't hear a thing about the fight. He just knew me as the biggest physical coward a father ever had produced.

That afternoon I went into Oakland, Cal., and paid $25 for a big canvas punching bag; lugged it back to the ranch; set it up, and that's when I started in the profession in which even the Italians will admit I'm the head man.

I am the champion.

RAIN, FOG HALTS YACHT TRIALS

By Associated Press

Newport, R. I., June 19—With a southeasterly breeze making, accompanied by rain and fog, the America's cup committee postponed today's scheduled contest between the candidates for the responsibility of meeting the British challenger, Tom Sopwith's Endeavor.

The postponement came as a disappointment to backers of Yankee, the Boston entry which yesterday trounced Weetamoe, Frederick Prince's candidate, in very light airs. Yankee was the best heavy weather boat four years ago and the Boston delegation are anxious to see if she has retained that quality, after extensive changes to her hull, in addition to becoming a fast craft in light weather.

She had been expected to go to the starting line today with Rainbow, Harold S. Vanderbilt's new cup candidate, and Weetamoe would have gone around the course with Gerard Lambert's Vanity, cup candidate of other years, not now ineligible because of changes in the rules.

REPLACEMENT OF MOTORS IS CALLED SMALL

Rising Sales Trend Is Visioned for Next Two Years

By HUGH F. BRADSHAW

W. S. Shipley

The building air conditioning equipment industry is starting out after business in an aggressive manner. The York Ice Machinery Company, pioneers in air conditioning, under the leadership of President W. S. Shipley, will shortly launch an intensive campaign designed to make people conscious of the benefits and human comfort of buildings and transportation vehicles equipped with air conditioning units so far as we know this is the first time newspaper space has been employed to bring attention to the industry which many think will play an increasing part in the next cycle of prosperity cycle.

Now [illegible] is gone and the [illegible] is putting on a display of [illegible] that [illegible] prevent [illegible] will develop with the [illegible] of real buyers [illegible] evening rail that [illegible] Shares of [illegible] companies have been [illegible] some bear talk on the [illegible] the season is nearly over. We might agree under ordinary circumstances [illegible] of the [illegible] investment houses [illegible] only [illegible].

Shares of fertilizer concerns are drawing the attention of traders. Oddly enough acreage reduction and crop restriction has stimulated the sales of fertilizer. We learn, from the current bulletin of the New England Financial Service, that the farmer has been collecting payments from the government, because of his agreement to reduce the size of crops, and then turning around and paying out large sums for fertilizer in order to obtain an enlarged output per acre.

[illegible] Agricultural Chemical [illegible] the prime purchasers [illegible] Standard [illegible] Big shares [illegible] Coca-Cola [illegible] Corn Products [illegible] Du Pont [illegible] Mathieson [illegible] Texas Gulf Sulphur [illegible] Union Carbide [illegible] Westinghouse [illegible] Woolworth [illegible] Yellow Truck [illegible] Air Reduction [illegible] Allied Chemical [illegible] American Can [illegible] Borden [illegible] Continental Can [illegible] Corn Exchange [illegible] Crown Cork [illegible] Eastman Kodak [illegible] General Foods [illegible] Liggett & Myers [illegible] Loew's [illegible] National Biscuit [illegible] National Dairy [illegible] Owens-Illinois Glass [illegible] Procter & Gamble [illegible] Schenley [illegible] Standard Brands [illegible] Tobacco Products [illegible] United Fruit [illegible] United Drug [illegible] U. The stock market continues to follow a course that is more reassuring than otherwise. There is reason to suppose that a more or less stubborn short account has been locked in by the recent rise and we would expect forward progress to continue at least to a point where the bears were forced to cover. Some issues on our hypothetical long list present excellent profits and we suggest moving stops up to at least partially protect profits.

Great Drilling Activity in Far Western Oil Lands

[illegible] work [illegible] the oil bearing lands [illegible] the Far West has resulted in one greatest drilling activity seen in that area in four years, Bank of America comments in a weekly review on Far Western business.

There are at present 175 wells drilling and 189 new wells started in California fields. Activity is centered particularly in the Los Angeles basin, where operators are in the San Joaquin valley fields where much is being made from [illegible].

Now wells completed this year [illegible] output of approximately [illegible] barrels from new wells in the same period last year.

In other sections of the Far West development work is also being [illegible] Mexico, Wyoming and Colorado, where an even greater amount of wildcatting or exploratory [illegible] in California.

The cost of sinking wells in various areas throughout the West [illegible] dicates the varying conditions encountered in different fields. In computing the expenditures for new developments the bank has computed the average cost in California at $60,000 per well; New Mexico, $60,000, Utah and Colorado $30,000; Wyoming, $25,000, and Montana, $15,000.

BOSTON STOCKS ARE MIXED

Edison Electric advanced a point. New England Telephone gained [illegible] fractionally higher, while American Telephone recorded a slight recession. American Woolen, lower Nash Motors eased.

Grains Higher in Chicago Market

Starting at [illegible] advance, September 65½, wheat [illegible] gained [illegible]. Corn opened unchanged to ½ higher, and subsequently declined.

Cotton Higher in New York Trading

New York, June 19 (INS)—With trading greatly accelerated, cotton prices snapped out of the [illegible] Monday and moved upward over [illegible] bale. Sentiment was aided by a sharp rise in silver and a steady [illegible].

New York, June 19—Wall Street followed its old-time system of "selling on good news" today and stocks, after a fairly firm opening, were subjected to considerable profit taking at the close.

Although the belated adjournment of Congress was seen as an entirely cheerful omen, speculative forces were thought to have largely discounted this expectancy.

Equities that have recently shown the most substantial gains suffered recessions of fractions to around 2 points. The trading volume, however, dwindled appreciably in the wake of the declining fluries.

Commodities developed some nervousness. Wheat and corn eased and cotton relinquished some of its recent advances. Silver futures turned upward as the signing of the new silver bill appeared imminent. Rubber lagged.

Bonds maintained a comparatively steady tone, but activity in the department was small. Foreign exchanges were without any especial interest.

The downward tendency of the majority of aviation stocks was attributed largely to estimates of earnings of one of the leading companies, which were quite a bit under anticipations.

Trade observers differed as to the extent of business recession to be expected in July and August, and how much it will be offset by government spending.

The chief latter item will be important was generally conceded, although, with the country faced by a huge deficit, there was some question as to just how far the administration may go in further disbursements to stimulate recovery.

Stocks displayed an irregularly higher trend in the first hour, with gains in some instances running to more than a point. A few issues managed to show gains of 2 points and these included Devoe & Reynolds and Owens Bottle. Caterpillar Tractor advanced a point, reflecting good earnings report of the company issued today.

Allied Chemical was a point higher. American Can, Freeport Texas, U. S. Steel and Westinghouse were down fractions to a point or so. Byers was a major fraction higher. Delaware & Hudson was a point above its last closing price.

Sales to 11 a. m. approximated 280,000 shares.

Price movements narrowed in the second hour as trading turned quiet. Losses still predominated throughout the list.

American Tobacco, American Sugar, Allied Chemical, Bethlehem Steel, Credit and Warren Brothers recorded gains ranging from fractions to more than a point.

Sales to noon approximated 450,000 shares.

The list turned downward in the third hour with losses in leaders ranging to more than 2 points. American Sugar was an outstanding strong spot, advancing more than a point. U. S. Steel common was down a point, and the preferred was 2 points lower. Atchison dropped around 2 points. Wright Aero extended its lose to 2 points.

Issues down a point or more included Amerada, American Can, American Smelting, Beet Sugar, Bethlehem Steel, Case Threshing, Celanese, Chrysler, Corn Products and Delaware & Lackawanna. U. S. Smelting, Freeport Texas, American Can, Westinghouse, Western Union, General Motors, Chrysler and Atchison.

Sales to 2 p. m. approximated 680,000 shares.

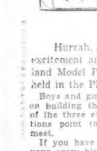
By LIEUTENANT L. F. ROSS
Boston Wing Commander

Hurrah, Junior Birdmen! There's going to be lots of fun and excitement and competition in the first annual official New England Model Plane Derby for members of this organization to be held in the Playstead of Franklin Park on Saturday, July 7.

Boys and girls are concentrating on building their models for each of the three events and all indications point to a most successful meet.

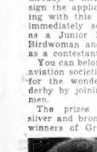
If you have not already sent in your entry blank you ought to do so at once. A book of rules for the contest and an entry blank will be sent to you free upon request. All you need do is to send a postal or letter to our headquarters at 100 Summer st., Boston, and ask for a copy of the regulations which will govern the Junior Birdmen model plane derby. We will do the rest.



If you are not already a member, you ought to sign the application blank appearing with this column and mail it immediately so we can list you as a Junior Birdman or Junior Birdwoman and make you eligible as a contestant for the July meet.

You can belong to all other junior aviation societies and still compete for the wonderful prizes in this derby by joining the Junior Birdmen.

The prize will include gold, silver and bronze medals for three winners of Group "A" and three of Group "B." The boy or girl piloting the model to victory for the three events will be named Boston Wing Co champion. He or she will receive a trophy and a free trip to Washington to take part in the National Model Plane contest on July 28.



"Eddie" Lucchini

The latest members who have sent in their entry blanks include: Leon H. Levesque, 19, of 11 Gilmore street, Dorchester; Ralph Holland, Canada, 15, of 11b Fayeweather street, Cambridge; Robert B. Higbie, 16, of 273 Concord street, Framingham, and "Eddie" LeBlanc, 16, of 8 Proctor street, Peabody.

Questions and Answers Box

Note: Send in letters or call at our headquarters and report the activities of your squadron, or ask all the questions you like. We will print the news and answer the inquiries as often as space permits.

Lawrence Cramer, 12, of Hyde Park avenue, Forest Hills—The most points you can win in one event are 100. If you win one event and no other contestant had won that many points in events that would become the model squadron.

Anthony Di Maggio, 16, of 8 Milton street, Arlington—Keep at it, Anthony. You'll make a good model yet. We'll come you into the Junior Birdmen any time you will be a contestant in the model plane derby.

Frances Tuttle, 15, of 53 Newport street, Quincy—We hold up our opinion upon awarding the prizes on the model plane contest on name until the Eaton Rifle officials send us the Junior Birdmen Model Plane Derby results.

Robert Goldenberg, 10, of 39 Thomas street, Revere—Don't be discouraged in forming a squadron. Keep on trying to find school chums and before long you will have the required seven members to form a squadron and then wear the "commodore's" hat that goes with that office. The examinations for Eagle rating will begin on August 1.

You'll be interested to learn that the Boston wing has members living in the Middle West and Far West. These include Donald and David Pibbado of Seattle, Wash.; M. D. Silcox of Willard, O.; Robert Wilkerson of East St. Louis, Ill., and Patrick Grady Sweeney, 13, of Mount Olive, Ill., whose picture appears today. We welcome these members and hope they will form their own squadrons to win the commander's and captain's bars.

The other Junior Birdman whose picture is printed today is "Eddie" Lucchini, 16, of 886 Somerville avenue, Somerville.

Here are more definitions for your scrapbook:

Compensating Rod—A strut (or rods) connecting the upper and lower ailerons so that a down motion of one aileron will help move the other up.

Control Horn—The cone-shaped fairing on the upper surface of the wing at the right and left side which provides a gap-tight protection of the cell to the fuselage and will not permit the cell some degree of movement without the use of gas.

Cowl (Engine)—A pennant or a bellow cone of light cloth on the wire cable of a captive balloon to warn aircraft of its presence.

Cowl (Entrance)—The portion of a wood frame from which the air flows to the streamlined chambers.

Cowl (Exit)—The portion of a wire streamlined which the air flows out of the streamlined chambers.

Cowling—The metal grooved conical member at the extreme bow of an aircraft, which engages with a hollow cone at the end of the mooring mast and permits a universal movement between the airship and the mooring mast.

Crow's Nest—A taper sleeve pivoted on a vane which indicates the wind direction. It is also like a sock and for that reason is often referred to as a "wind sock."

Cylinder—An expansion used by the pilot, in his cockpit, while the plane is resting on the ground according to the mechanic that he has anointed on the ignition and is ready to have his propeller turned over to start the motor.

Control Cable—The line of wire or stranded cable leading from the control column in the cockpit to the control units.

Control Column—A lever having a wheel that turns mounted at its upper end for operating the longitudinal and lateral control surfaces of an airplane. This type of control is called "wheel control."

MUSICAL CLASSIC BY NOEL COWARD IS AIR FEATURE

Radio to Stage 'Bitter Sweet' Tonight

By N. F. T.

Last among the colorful Noel Coward musical creations, according to Noel Coward, as well as some shrewd theatrical critics of note, was the "Bitter Sweet" setting. Peggy Wood had the original role in it across the water. London and later New York theatergoers applauded aplenty during a long 1929-30 run. Tonight I find the 60 "mike" minutes, where Gladys Swarthaut, John Barclay, James Melton and their vocal company hold forth (WEEI at 10 o'clock), offers the radio version of "Bitter Sweet" to be breezed from coast to coast.

Irra Petina, long, tall, torch-singing gal from Dixie, takes a guest artist turn this evening along with the "King's Jesters" as they go to broadcast for Ray Perkins and his "promenade" program (WEEI) from 9:30 until 10 p. m.

HUB HIGHLIGHT

Some shifting about is apparently much anticipated in the local "Yankee Network" management. Not long ago the Federal Radio Commission at Washington was asked to permit the moving of WAAB equipment and a switch of the wavelength from 1130 kilocycles, its present place on the dial. An okay hasn't yet resulted. Know further need it be said that WNAC alterations are likewise wanted. This time the 830 kilocycle channel so long occupied by WHDH is involved. There is an application reposing on file which seeks a grant for WNAC to abandon its present place and put state's rival echoes where WHDH has been and continues wafting tidings. Fee-Fo-Fi-Fum, the nostrils seem to catch a whiff of spirited radio rahjah rivalry in the becoming brisk June winds. Watch the heretofore easy-going WHDH folks fight!

Abe Lyman, band boss, who conducts the weekly "Accordianna" attraction (WNAC) each Tuesday evening, let her made known that the popular 30 minutes of melody with Vivienne Segal has been contracted to carry on right through the summer months.

THIS FAR-THAT AIR

Mary Stanley, a rare little personality of 13 years and hailing from Wellston, brightens the "Secret Agent X9" program under Boston American auspices (WAAB) tonight—come 6:30. Mary is a singer, as those who listen will agree. The Chief will be there, too, telling about the big time (more than 10,000 Secret Agent followers enjoyed on their outing at Norumbega Park on Saturday last—what a day it was! . . . Tito Guizar, romantic troubador of the wide Mexican way, has been pulling big audiences to Loew's Orpheum since Saturday. He has also been pulling them. If so, applapping is any longer a good indication. Tito fills the WBZ four o'clock spot, his voice this afternoon between 4:45 and 5 o'clock . . . Patrons of the colyum here report early lining up for those short radio star sketches and pictures at present appearing daily on the page all of the very gratifying expressions are hereby acknowledged with due thanks . . . Yes, it's true! Amos n' Andy plan to pull away and go vacationing for two weeks, as of July 15. Sam Hayes, their final loud-speaker layoff in five years.

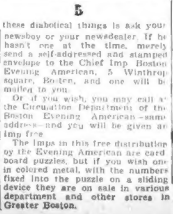
Here's a Real Puzzler for You

Today—Up the middle and around edges



A B

Answer to yesterday's problem: A, Possible; B, Impossible.

Have you received your Imp yet? Thousands have got theirs.

But there are still other thousands to be given out free by the Boston Evening American, therefore if you haven't got your Imp yet you should risk your peace of mind and get yours before it is too late.

Imp is a game more fascinating than cross-word puzzles were when they were the rage—and the Boston Evening American with one hand held up to ward off blows, offers you the Imps free.

All you need do is get one of these diabolical things is ask your dealer to give you one. If he hasn't one at the time, merely send a self-addressed and stamped envelope to the Chief Imp, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop square, Boston, and one will be forwarded to you.

Of if you wish, you may call at the Boston Evening American office and they are on sale in various department and other stores in Greater Boston.

Among Boston Favorites on Air

ALICE O'LEARY

Alice O'Leary . . . Who was known as Alice Dyer . . . To the school boys and girls in Malden . . . Less than 10 years ago . . . But who changed her name . . . Seven years ago . . . By marriage . . . And occupation . . . Three years ago . . . by out-warbling 1000 other aspirants . . . At the Paul Whiteman audition . . . In 1931 . . . At the WBZ studios

Alice is also Mama . . . For there are two Geary's . . . Tommy, six . . . who wants to be a West Pointer . . . And Alice, four . . . Who wants to warble like Mama . . . And who has already started vocal training.

In Chelsea, the soprano was born . . . 28 years ago . . . Oh, she makes no secret of it . . . And she played in elimentary and high school operettas . . . And became a stenographer after high school . . . Then a wool brokerage office . . . Until business went threadbare . . . And she began to think of radio fame.

Then something important happened . . . In 1927 . . . And she was married . . . Will Geary, Jr., Rex the other half . . . And with Alice having more opportunity for study and practice . . . Until the Whiteman audition was held . . . With Alice voicing her way to the top . . . And she was well started to radio fame.

Alice is of Spanish descent . . . The name being Dias back in Civil War times . . . When Grandpa Emanuel Dias took up arms . . . But he later changed it to Dyer . . . After the war . . . And is still Dyer today in Medford.

Alice sleeps ten hours a night . . . And has no breakfast except orange juice and coffee . . . And weighs 120 pounds . . . For her five feet three inches . . . And her hair is chestnut brown . . . With large eyes to match . . . And smoke does not get in them . . . Because Alice doesn't smoke.

CURB FOR DUST ILLS SOUGHT

By International News Service

Saranac Lake, N. Y., June 19—The problem of silicosis, a major industrial disease caused by inhalation of dust was before the first silicosis symposium today in Saranac laboratory.

At the morning session last night, Dr. Roy R. Jones, acting director of the United States Public Health Service, said there is vast difference in various dusts, the amount of free silica in them determining their harmfulness.

"Age, race, sex," he said, "are of little importance in the development of silicosis," he said.

Doland E. L. Cunningg, assistant director of Saranac laboratory, said that to control the disease each industry should evaluate the dust hazard.

MRS. DALL GOES TO RENO, TALKS WITH LAWYER

By Universal Service

Reno, June 19—An unexpected visitor here was Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall, only daughter of President and Mrs. Roosevelt, who has taken up her residence at Calvada, Nev.

Mrs. Dall, wife of Curtis B. Dall, a broker in New York, visited the attorney she has retained, Samuel Platt. Afterwards she shopped at Crossed Sabres with a family friend, Mrs. H. F. Dana, who lives at a desert ranch near Pyramid Lake. Platt still was silent on Mrs. Dall's reported divorce plans.

SECRET SERVICE GUARD

Meanwhile, federal secret service men were busily guarding the home of Mrs. Dall and her two children, "Sistie" and "Buzzie," here Lake Tahoe.

Charles Rich, federal agent, will remain on duty here throughout the time Mrs. Dall is here, it became known, and a chauffeur for Attorney Platt, will remain at the cottage as a secret service guard.

RESIDENTS PUZZLED

Presence of the secret service men, one of whose important duties is to guard the President, on duty at the log cabin residence of the President's only daughter and her children, caused some speculation locally.

Curious residents of the mountain-side cabins have been kept off the private grounds surrounding the cabin leased by Mrs. Dall, which is two hours away from Reno by a circuitous route.

Dorchester Boy's Jaunt Is Ended

Three-year-old Clifford McLoud, of Crombie street, Dorchester, was back home again today after getting himself "losted" a mile from his home. It was the second time in two years that he had been "picked up" by police.

Stopping the 'Hit-and-Run' Drivers Our Problem

THE number of so-called "hit-and-run" drivers on the Bay State highways seems constantly increasing. Evidences of a growing heartlessness are not lacking.

Only last week an automobilist struck and injured a young man, stopped to toss the shattered body behind roadside bushes in Methuen and sped away.

The death ride over the Charlestown "Loop" was the outstanding "hit-and-run" case of recent months.

"Hit-and-runners" who leave their mangled victims to suffer or die alone and unaided are mere beasts. As soon expect mercy in the lions' cage as from them. They deserve NO mercy.

Perhaps the reason so many "hit-and-run" drivers are "getting away with it" is because the Commonwealth no longer pays a reward for their apprehension.

It is obviously impossible for the state, city, town, Metropolitan and county police and constabulary to be at every turn of our thousands of miles of Bay State highways.

Yet the "hit-and-run" driver may get in his despicable work at any point on the road map.

Years ago special crusades were directed against the "hit-and-runners" but rewards paid to the assisting witnesses were altogether too high.

THERE is no need of distributing rewards that resemble Irish Sweepstakes prizes from the Commonwealth's coffers. A reward of $50 should be given for first evidence leading to the arrest and conviction in the lower courts of any "hit-and-run" driver.

Just as jail sentences are now compulsory for second offense tipsy driving, so jail sentences should be made compulsory for second offense "hit-and-run" drivers. This of course would not affect the likelihood of their going to jail on the first offense, action being left to the judgment of the court.

In all cases there should be a mandatory fine of $50 to reimburse the Commonwealth's reward fund. A few years ago there was a case where $150 reward was paid by the state for the arrest of a "hit-and-run" driver, who was later fined one-third of that amount.

Finally, the "hit-and-run" driver should feel two more penalties: He should be barred for life from being given an operator's license. And he should be barred for life from being granted registration plates for any sort of automotive vehicle.

Surely we can cut down the "hit-and-run" casualties if we act sensibly and really try to do it.

Our Goals Suggested

Colonel Benjamin A. Franklin, former president of Associated Industries of Massachusetts, discusses the return of prosperity. He thinks present-day idealism should have definite aims. He suggests:

"A job within one's capabilities.
"Reasonable security in it.
"Weekly income to support a family.
"A beneficial society, on a contributory plan, with benefits for sickness and an insurance policy against old age and death.
"A small house with a garden.
"Small taxes.
"A nearby library, church and school.
"A nearby playground for children.
"Reasonable leisure.
"Household appliances.
"A radio.
"Possibly a small car with a garage.
"Opportunity for a better job in accordance with training, education, ambition and energy and a higher standard of living."

Colonel Franklin thinks it probable that these objectives can be achieved only through individualism, with national economic planning WITHOUT bureaucracy.

Some Lights Needed

Millions for beauty but not one cent for the safety of children.

Such seems to be the civic motto when we declare we haven't $800 which might save the lives of school children during the summer months.

Mary Marshall, 10, of the West End, died last week because the city officials haven't the $800 necessary to install traffic lights on "Death Highway"—a section of the new road along the Charles River between Cambridge and Leverett streets.

The girl's death has aroused the clergy and residents of the [illegible]. Th y demand traffic lights to save the lives of the children who must cross this dangerous road to enjoy the beauties of the new Charlesbank.

Millions have been spent to beautify and create this recreation spot. But the children and their mothers must risk their lives to enjoy it because the traffic division can't find $800 for traffic lights.

We're Making Progress

Dean William F. Linehan, delivering the baccalaureate address at Teachers' College of the City of Boston, summarized Greater Boston college reports and surveys. He found the consensus of opinion, largely based on actual placements of students in jobs, was that things are much better than they were a year ago.

Dean Linehan stated that one big Boston institution has found situations for 50 per cent more graduates than it was possible to do last year. So this time it's the "college barometer" that shows we're making progress.

Banks a Century Old

Massachusetts is said to lead all the states in the number of savings institutions that have successfully rounded out a century or more of existence.

The Hingham Institution for Savings is the latest to join the long procession. Bank Commissioner Arthur Guy's statistics will show a number of others that will be added to the "century-old" list within the next few months.

An unusual feature of the Hingham bank history is that Treasurer Howard P. Hersey, who recently passed away, had been connected with the institution for more than fifty years.

Experience Is Valuable

James Roosevelt, son of the President, speaking to school graduates in Watertown, told what happened to him when he was graduated from college. His father gave him transportation to a Canadian lumber mill. There he worked for eight cents an hour.

James Roosevelt declared his experience doing humble tasks had proved very valuable to him in later years. Moral: Experience is ALWAYS valuable.

Beaten Before He Starts -:- By T. E. Powers

Listen, World! -:- -:- By Elsie Robinson

HAVE WOMEN LOST IN THE SHUFFLE?

"A NEW WOMAN". Not so long ago that expression was the meeriest jeer one could hurl at a lady. Better even, to have six toes, or a beard on one's dimpled chin, or belong to the Fallen Sisterhood, than to be a "suffragette."

The world understood the deformed or delinquent. Be they ever so gnarled or naughty, they were still female. But how could one classify those "unnatural creatures" who went around demanding men's rights, aping men's costumes and customs, defying the decencies generally?

Elsie Robinson

Then, gradually, public opinion changed. Women, it seemed, could still be adequate even if they did mark a ballot and dispense, with simpers, swoons and smelling salts. Today, the joke's on Grandma. And the Gals are all toddling around in trousers, breaking male athletic records, leading labor riots and raising Cain generally—with much accompanying applause.

All of which, I'm sure, is a grand thing for the race. We can, at a pinch, put up with piffling papas. But our mamas should be two-fisted humans with all the privileges and perquisite thereof, if biology isn't to ravel out. So I'm strong for the New Women of 1934.

WHAT USED TO BE

And yet, as I look them over, I wonder; and I often think of something Margaret Jackson wrote in a magazine article a year ago. She said:

"There used to be in the world a thing called femininity which had little to do with chiffon and perfume. It was just as feminine in a calico house dress or a long-sleeved cotton sleeping garment that buttoned primly at the neck. It was a thing greatly admired by men in all classes of society, greatly loved, set above all other treasures.

"It was a thing of the spirit. It was made up of elements that could not be bought in any salon, not put on like a bracelet. Gentleness and refinement and integrity were its component parts. Modesty and sweetness and chastity were its heritage. Gayety was its handmaiden. And, more still, the sheer quality of being a woman made it such a fine thing that nothing could quite be compared to it.

"An old, old lady, withered, frail, tired, with sex a forsaken word, might still be so essentially feminine that none ever forgot it."

"A thing called femininity." Yes, they had it. But it certainly wasn't a 100 per cent treat. Such idiotic styles—pinched toes, strangled tonsils, pinched waists, "limbs" lost in starched billows of petticoats. Such outrageous conventions—ghastly repressions that crippled spirits for life, sickly sentimentalities, downright nasty pruderies.

Thank Heaven, that's done with forever.

How refreshing our modern modes and manners are; how easy on the disposition and the eye. What a grand lot of things Miss 1934 can do for and with herself. Just cast your eye over the beauty ads or the college courses. Miss 1934 may, frequently, dose, have the brains of a tadpole and the beauty of a barnboard. But when Madame Rose and Prof. Jones get through with her she makes Cleopatra and Sappho look like amateur night.

QUAINT AS OLD THINGS

And yet, as I said before, looking her over—I wonder.

Have they really "got everything"—those triumphant modern females? Or has something been lost in the shuffle?

"A thing called femininity." What an old fashioned phrase. Quaint as lavender sticks and yellowed lace—crystal prisms twinkling beneath pale, waxen candles—rose jars filled with potpourri—pink roses tucked between a tiny ear and a "Janice Meredith" curl.

"Swell for a soap wrapper," laughs suntanned Sally, swishing her cigarette, "but I'd like to have seen 'em in action."

"I saw 'em in action," Sally. And maybe you'd be surprised! For with that old-fashioned primness, that antiquated modesty and dignity and formal graciousness—yes, even with the simpers, swoons and smellin' salts—went something else that you've yet to demonstrate, in spite of your high-flyin' record.

THEY HAD WHAT IT TOOK, KID.

Gentle, demure, sentimental, silly, pitifully ignorant. Yet they had what it took to follow their men into the terror and hardship of the Covered Wagon trail! They had what it took to bear their babies in agony and loneliness a hundred miles from the nearest doctor, nurse or drug store! They had what it took to build a nation in a savage wilderness, shut off for all their years from the places and the people they had loved!

And today their granddaughters have "WOMEN'S RIGHTS." Meaning frequently the right to raise hell—and then cry off when pay day comes around. But I wonder if, in spite of all that, THEY HAVE AS MUCH OF WHAT IT TAKES TO BE GREAT HUMAN BEINGS?

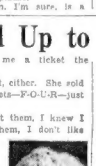
Bound Up to a Date! -:- By Winifred Black

Helen sold me a ticket the other day.

No she didn't, either. She sold me four tickets—F-O-U-R—just like that!

I didn't want them, I knew I couldn't use them, I don't like concerts in particular and this sort of concert especially.

And anyhow who wants to tie themselves down for some special evening three weeks ahead of time when for all you know Uncle Abner may invite you for a lovely motor trip for the week-end, or somebody really interesting may turn up for a day or so.



Winifred Black

I hate to be tied to a date—don't you?

Whisper—I'll tell you the truth. Someone I know very well a long time ago used to tell me that the only thing a fence meant to me was something to jump over.

And that's just the way I feel about a far away engagement.

It's all right three weeks ahead.

Not so bad two weeks ahead.

But one week ahead and I feel as if I had promised to drag a plow through a muddy field from daylight till dusk and all I can do the last four days of that week is to think up excuses and apologies and perfectly good reasons for getting out of those tickets.

I know all this. I'd been through it hundreds of times, but when Helen took those four tickets out of her bag, and said:

"Take these for me, will you dear, they're the only ones I have left and it will help me keep up my quota."

And did I fix Dear Helen with my glittering eye, and say coldly:

"Cause why? You know I don't like concerts, you know I hate these fuss-and-feathers affairs, why do you try to drag me into them?"

I did not.

Nothing of the sort.

I smiled the sweetest kind of a smile and said:

"Why, of course, darling. I'll be delighted."

And I was delighted — while Helen was there.

She hadn't been out of the house five minutes before I was trying to plan bitterly and vindictively what I'd do and say and look the next time Dear Helen tried to make me buy even one single little lonesome ticket for anything, anywhere, any time.

Dear Helen wants to see you as exhibit A—don't you see?

THE SUREST SIGN

Fish are biting! From a train
Walking down a dusty lane
I beheld a bright-eyed lad,
Bare of foot and knickers clad,
Heading for his favorite hole
With a can of bait and pole.

Orchards blossomy and gay
Lined the railroad's right of way.
As we speeded on it seemed
Lazily I sat and dreamed,
Lost to what was going on
'Til that boy I looked upon!

Round the pole was wrapped a line,
Just as once I threaded mine.
Very plainly I beheld
A sinker kindly blacksmiths weld,
And that happiest of freight
For a boy—a can of bait!

Gone was I and lost was he
Swiftly to the sight of me,
But I pass the news along
Unto all the grown-up throng.
Fish are biting! Fishing's fine!
From a boy I've had the sign!

Human Side of the News; Hid Great Treasure

By Edwin C. Hill

When the haughty Spanish conquistadores struck boldly into the unknown lands of South and Central America, appearing, in their shining armor and astride their great war horses, like gods, to the simple natives, they tore down ancient civilizations that were literally plated with gold.

Pizarro in Peru looted from the Incas at least five hundred million dollars in gold. Hundreds of millions more Cortez in Mexico sent whole shiploads of gold home to his royal master and enriched himself and his men. Alvarado, sweeping over the Maya kingdoms of Central America, won golden treasure by the ton.

VAST HOARD HIDDEN

But for every ounce of gold wrested from them by the greed-mad ened Spanish conquerors, the priests and the people buried in their jungles and sank in their lakes at least two ounces.

A treasure beyond imagination, equal, probably, to the world's gold reserve today, since it was the accumulation of many many centuries.

There it has lain hidden, these four hundred years, the hiding places known only to a few priests of the old religions, and guarded with sullen determination.

But a young American, Lieut. Georgs Williams, is discovering these ancient and secret hoards of gold and already, with the aid of a marvelous and delicate electrical machine, he is reported to have a hoard of the lost treasure. It is the most fascinating story, "believe it or not."

Williams invented a "listening" machine of wires and dials and earphones. Wherever tradition locates the hiding place of Aztec or Mayan gold, Williams goes with his miraculous device.

GOLD DETECTOR

Wires attached to metal stakes driven into the ground convey to ear phones, delicately adjusted by dials, like the dials of your radio, a kind of electrical agitation wherever gold lies buried.

To the Cocle mountains of Central America went Lieut. Williams with his uncanny listening machine. In the heart of the jungle he drove his stakes, adjusted his earphones and twirled his dials. "Dig here," said Williams, and the spades struck upon old temple treasures.

In the ruins of old Panama City, looted and burned by the pirate, Sir Henry Morgan, in the long ago, Georgs Williams set his machine a-clicking.

Chalices of solid gold rewarded him. Back and forth he prowls today among the ruins of the ancient city, turning up golden pitchers and bowls, drinking cups, sacred objects and gold bars.

They were all buried in haste when Morgan and his bloody pirates fell upon the Spanish city and ran its gutters red with blood while the flames roared high.

Every year Williams takes his magic finder to the Cocle mountains, home of a tribe which fled with its golden treasure from the Spanish conquerors. And every year he returns laden with solid gold.

On his last trip he discovered the sacred mountains of the old Mayan. The whole top of the mount is carved in the unreadable hieroglyphs of a forgotten race.

Upon the mountain slopes are the tombs of the old kings and warriors, skeletons resting upon gold plates, lying among gold ornaments.

He has dug up enough to convince him that the sacred mountains contain one of the greatest treasures of the world.

And there he will go this Winter, daring fever and deadly snakes and the poisoned arrows of hostile natives to sink his stakes and listen for the murmur in the earphones that will betray to modern science the golden treasure of a past.

Politics Go On Despite Adjournment

By James T. Williams, Jr.

Adjournment of Congress does not usher in an adjournment of politics, either federal or state.

As the 73rd Congress passes into history, the campaign begins throughout the Union for the election of the 74th Congress.

ALL MEMBERS OF HOUSE

Tuesday, November 6, is general election day this year in all states of the Union, except the State of Maine. Maine will elect one United States Senator, three members of the House, and state and county officers on Monday, September 10 next.

Throughout the Union there are 35 United States Senators to be elected, three more than the 32 who are elected in regular order every two years. The three senators to be elected out of the regular order, due to vacancies created by death or resignation, will be one in Montana, one in New Mexico and one in Tennessee. The late Senator Walsh of Montana resigned to accept the portfolio of justice in the Supreme Court of Roosevelt, but died on the eve of Inauguration Day. Senator Bratton of New Mexico resigned his senatorship to accept an appointment on the United States Circuit Court of Appeals and Senator Hull of Tennessee resigned his senatorship to become President Roosevelt's Secretary of State.

In addition to the senators to be elected are all members of the House, numbering four hundred and thirty-five, of the forty-eight states. Thirty-five will elect governors this year, and many of them will also elect other state officials and thousands of county and local officials. A large majority of whom are a useless expense to the people who foot the bill not only for their nomination and election but also for the salaries and expenses of their useless offices.

And election costs in this country are second in importance only to the honesty, accuracy and the convenience of the electors.

Dr. Joseph T. Harris, professor of political science at the University of Washington, in a recent book published by the Bookings Institute, has thrown new light upon the excessive burden upon the people of election costs.

ONE DOLLAR A VOTE

Owing to the incomplete data available, it is not easy to make general estimates of election costs for the whole country. From the detailed cost records however of many communities all over the country examined by Dr. Harris, he thinks it safe to estimate that average cost of elections throughout the country amounts to at least one dollar for every vote cast.

The only state in which complete data are available covering election costs for the entire state, rural as well as urban, is Ohio.

In 1930, Ohio elections cost the people of the state two million, eight hundred and fifty nine thousand, three hundred and twelve dollars and eighty cents, or one dollar and twenty-seven cents per vote cast.

By way of being conservative, this authority estimates the annual election costs for the entire country at forty million dollars, assuming that Ohio's election cost was higher than the average.

There is no good reason why the American people should be compelled to pay forty million dollars or more for the federal, state or local elections which they will hold this year. The study made by Dr. Harris of this subject has convinced him that this cost can be reduced to ten million dollars, or from an average cost per voter of one dollar to twenty-five cents.

ELECTION COSTS EXCESSIVE

Approximately two-thirds of the total cost of elections in the majority of our cities is due to the amount paid election officials. This is collected from city to city. Excessive election costs are also due to the number of elections in many cities which can and should be reduced.

By divorcing election administration from political spoils, by cutting down the number of election officials as well as the number of elections, and by abolishing useless county and local offices, the cost of elections in this country can easily be reduced from more than one dollar per vote cast to twenty-five cents or less. But the politicians will never make this reduction. They will oppose it.

The more elections, the more offices to be maintained, the more officials to be supported, the greater the power of the politician and the greater the expense to the over-taxed people of this country North, East, South and West.

2—Why is a diamond cutter not usually called by the more general term a lapidary?

3—When were diamonds first cut to develop their beauty and value?

4—What natural quality of the diamond is utilized in cutting it?

5—What two cities are prominent in the diamond cutting and polishing industry?

ANSWERS

1—In Europe, Holland, Belgium, Germany and France are the centers. Some of the stones which emanate from India, Ceylon and China are native-cut, but the work is crude, necessitating re-cutting before being put on the European market.

2—Because the diamond cutter cuts diamonds only. The lapidary cuts and polishes all other precious and semi-precious stones. Each employs separate and distinct methods in cutting.

3—In the fifteenth century a Dutch lapidary invented the first process for the cutting and polishing of diamonds, although crude methods of polishing the natural surfaces were in use in India long before that. About 1886 the first machine was invented to shape the diamonds, and today all except the most delicate work is done by machines.

4—Cleavage—the tendency to split along definite lines, easily predetermined. The diamond is cemented to a wooden holder, and a steel blade is applied in a direction parallel to an octahedral face; a sharp blow upon the back of the blade is sufficient to accomplish the cleaving.

5—Antwerp and Amsterdam. The industry in the latter city is said to have had its inception in a collection of rough diamonds which were deposited in an Amsterdam bank centuries ago as collateral for a loan and which the bank officials ordered cut.
